For International News Service.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—The financial conference agreement, making the United States a partner with the allies in the profits and responsibilities of enforcement of the Dawes plan, was signed at 10:40 a. m. today. Ambassadors Herrick and Kellogg, the latter the secretary of state designate, and Colonel Logan sgined for the United States.

At the last minute the clause in Section A reading "In an amount not exceeding $350,000,000," referring to the total the United States will receive in satisfaction of its claims against Germany, was stricken out.

After the ceremony of signing had been concluded, Premier Herriot addressed the conference, then Ambassador Kellogg and the French premier went into a long conference.

"There have been three great events of recent years," Ambassador Kellogg told the conference. "The first was the Dawes report; the second, the London conference; and the third, the present Paris agreement. It will mark the beginning of a new era for Europe which will have a reflex action on all the nations of the world.

Indications Point to Work Half Over by Jan. 24; Name Committees

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 14.—Prospects were bright today for the Legislature to wind up the first half of its biennial session by January 24.

The final organization work was to be completed today with announcement of Senate committees by Lieutenant-Governor C. C. Young.

Appropriation of $10,000 for Reforestation Station Is Sought by Senator

By GIL A. COWAN
For Southland News Service.
Special to The Evening News.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 14.—Senator Burlingame Johnson of Pasadena, representing the Glendale district, has introduced a bill calling for a $10,000 appropriation by the state for a reforestation experiment station. The federal government, he says, will put up a like amount.

This experiment station is essential to reforestation because of climatic conditions, particularly the lack of rainfall which makes the growth of trees a difficult task, he said. Other bills providing for the reforestation of "cut over" timber land will be introduced next week by the senator.

Speaker Frank F. Merriam of the assembly is introducing a bill to protect the seals at Seal Beach, near his home. Surf fishermen have shot hundreds of the yelping creatures for scaring away fish.

High Post to Weller

As exclusively predicted by this writer, Assemblyman Frank Weller of Glendale was named to the important judiciary committee with thirty lawyer members of the assembly of the California Legislature eligible to the post.

Mr. Weller has the confidence of the administration and is one of Speaker Frank F. Merriam's closest friends. His political career to date has been so successful that with his youth and sound judgment, the Glendale man will likely go far in public life.

The assembly is a good school, the judiciary committee is a law course in itself.

HUGHES' PART IN LEAVING EXPLAINED

Skeptical Washington Looks For 'Inside' Reason Non-Existent

By DAVID LAWRENCE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Skepticism about the real reasons for resignations and appointments is so ingrained here that it was only natural for official Washington to endeavor to find some other basis for the departure of the secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes, than the one given in the letters he exchanged with President Coolidge.

But the truth is not difficult to ascertain. Surprising as the announcement may have been to the general public, it was not to the many close friends of Mr. Hughes, to whom he had confided his earnest wish to leave office on March 4. He talked it over with President Coolidge just after election and the word was passed around that Mr. Hughes had agreed to stay at least an other year.

Why did he resign now? Because the secretary found that foreign relations were in such a status as would permit him to leave on March 4th whereas if he stayed longer he might become so wrapped up in big questions of foreign policy as to prevent his resignation altogether even at the end of a year.

Mr. Hughes has had every honor that can come in public service except the presidency of the United States and he came near that in 1916. He reached one of the highest honors in his profession as associate justice of the supreme court of the United States. He was governor of New York state

POWER PLANT MATTER IS UNSETTLED

Jones of Washington Offers Commission Plan for Muscle Shoals

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—After weeks of wrangling and indecision, the Senate today passed finally the Underwood Muscle Shoals bills. The bill now goes to conference between the two Houses, where differences between it and the Henry Ford ofer accepted by the lower chamber must be ironed out.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14—Final passage of the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill was virtually assured this afternoon when the Senate defeated a move to substitute the Jones commission plan for it.

Administration senators who previously voted for the Jones bill, reversed themselves on the ballot and supported the Underwood measure. The vote was 43 to 38 in favor of the Underwood plan.

For the second time within a week the Senate this afternoon adopted the Underwood bill for disposing of the government's huge Muscle Shoals water power project.

Running In Circles

The Underwood plan was substituted for the Norris government ownership bill, which the Senate adopted late yesterday. It was the second time this substitution was made by the Senate. As a result, the Senate was running in a perfect legislative circle, having again returned to the spot it occupied a week ago, with final enactment of the bill no nearer.

The vote was 46 to 33, with the Norris group getting only scattered support from the Republican side. The Underwood forces combined both administration and Democratic support and a minor faction irreconcilably opposed to government ownership. On its previous adoption, the Underwood plan won by a vote of 47 to 36 with the same lines maintained as in today's ballot.

Senator Jones, Republican of Washington, immediately offered his plan, creating a commission as a substitute for the Underwood bill.

LAND OFFERED VISITED BY COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Inclement Weather Prevents Complete Examination; To Return Later

The site offered by Burbank for the University of California, southern branch, is looked upon with favor, following an inspection this morning by the site committee chosen by the regents of the university to examine the various sites offered. There were present from this committee H. W. O'Melveny, chairman; W. L. Valentine, president of the Automobile Club of Southern California, and Harry Chandler, publisher and proprietor of the Los Angeles Times.

They were conducted over the site by Mayor J. C. Crawford of Burbank and a representative body of men from that city. The tour of inspection started at the Chamber of Commerce offices and led along San Fernando road to the Benmar Hills tract office, thence up to the foothills and along University avenue to Walnut avenue.

The members of the committee expressed themselves as favorably impressed with the site, which now comprises 410 acres. The Glendale Chamber of Commerce has endorsed the site.

A heavy downpour of rain prevented the committee from obtaining as comprehensive an idea of the location as they had desired, and it is understood that the site will be revisited in the near future.

"I had no idea such a beautiful tract of land was available in this vicinity," Mr. O'Melveny, who appeared particularly impressed, said. "I came out prepared to find an excellent site, as I had been told, but the actuality is far above expectations. I will certainly return on a clear day and look the location over in detail."

The committee will meet with the regents of the university tomorrow morning in Los Angeles, when others of the fourteen sites now known to be offered will come in for consideration.

Speaking of the visit of the committee to Burbank this morning, Mayor Crawford said:

Gratified at Visit

"While we are all gratified that the committee came in person to visit the site offered by Burbank, we are much disappointed to think that the weather was so unpropitious. We feel that this site is ideal for the future home of the University of California, southern branch, and we want the committee to see it at its best. This they have assured me they will do."

Following is the list of Burbank officials and business men who conducted the committee over the site: Mayor J. C. Crawford, L. H. Wood, president of the Realty board; A. E. Dufur, president of the Chamber of Commerce; J. W. Charleville, manager of the Chamber of Commerce; R. O. Church, chairman of the C. of C. schools and colleges committee; W. A. Blanchard, of this committee; B. W. Marks, founder of Benmar Hills; Dominick Morro; M. A. Bessolo.

Men Changed Into Midgets Or Giants! Other Miracles!

BERKELEY, Jan. 14.—Animals or men changed into giants or midgets at will.

Life perpetuated almost at will.

Propagation absolutely controlled.

These and many more modern miracles are possibilities as a result of a series of experiments being conducted by Dr. Herbert M Evans of the University of California and a corps of assistants on rats, tadpoles and guinea pigs, it became known today through an article written by the scientist for the California Monthly, a college publication.

Dr. Evans has designated the experimental factor Vitamin X.

"It is difficult to make any statement," Dr. Evans said, "regarding the practical significance of the work, primarily because we have demonstrated that the new vitamin is abundantly distributed in common foods. Science is often injured through specific claims for what it will effect but almost no claims are too extravagant when we defend the ultimate, even practical, outcome of scientific effort to say nothing of enlargement of mental horizon."

He revealed that the experiments had progressed far enough that they were able to turn normal animals into giants by frequent injection of the pituitary gland fluid.

Radio Fans' Idol To Quit Prison With Auto, Bankroll

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 14.—Harry M. Snodgrass, the "king of the ivories," and idol of the country's radio fans, was writing his farewell speech today.

Today at Station WOS, which for him unlocked the doors to fame and wealth, Snodgrass will bid his invisible audience good bye. He will play its favorite pieces and then "sign off" permanently. He will also "sign off" with the prison orchestra, for on Friday morning a new life will start for him. It will be the life of a highly paid artist.

Snodgrass' departure from prison, like his rise to fame here, will be unparalleled. He will ride forth in an automobile assembled by experienced prison mechanics from parts received from virtually all sections of the United States. From Texas came the steering wheel; from Arizona, the carburetor; Ohio radio fans sent the tires, Michigan the blocks, Chicago the top, and the remaining parts came like a shower from every point of the compass.

With him, as passenger in his "radio flivver" will be Mrs. Snodgrass and their 8 year old son, to say nothing of a bank roll estimated at $6,000.

Governor Sam A. Baker summoned Snodgrass to his office late yesterday, congratulated him and wished him success. The governor then added the warning that if Snodgrass ever got back into the Missouri penitentiary, he would not be allowed the privilege of playing with the prison orchestra or for Station WOS. Snodgrass will start his vaudeville tour at Evanston, Ind., January 18.

CITY TO STAY IN VALLEY CHAMBER

Commerce Board After Plea Decides to Remain as Associated Unit

After four officers of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the San Fernando valley appeared before the directors of the Glendale chamber last night, and urged the local body reconsider its action in withdrawing from the association, the directors voted unanimously to retain membership and name three representatives from Glendale on the general board of the associated chambers.

Leo D. Lesperance of Pacoima, newly elected president of the association; O. B. Bodkins of Tujunga, director, and Secretary O. J. Renfrew spoke in behalf of Glendale's re-establishing its connection with the joint body. Difficulties which have arisen in the past and which formed the basic reasons for this city's withdrawal several months ago have been overcome, the speakers promised. They said "the association needs the city of Glendale much more than Glendale needs the association, and for this reason begged for a reconsideration of Glendale's action. W. E. Hodges of Mission Acres, another director of the association, was present but did not speak.

After recommendations of Director George B. Karr and L. T. Rowley, committee chairman were made to the board, favoring Glendale's further participation, it was voted unanimously to continue a member of the associated chambers body.

Glendale's Reasons

Glendale voted to withdraw from the organization of valley chambers several months ago, when it was argued that the bulk of the problems the body had to face in no way affected this city and the mode of financing the association was declared unfair to the Glendale chamber. Revision of the by-laws obliterates most of the points of objection, President Lesperance stated.

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce directors voted not to endorse or sponsor the proposed Pacific Electric tunnel station on Figueroa street, Los Angeles. The report of a committee appointed to investigate the merits of the proposed station was read, showing that the site selected for the station would be only 800 feet from Hill street and would, if installed, result in a general slowing up of the train schedules between Glendale and Los Angeles. The report advised against the station General Manager Pontius of the Pacific Electric also rendered an adverse report. Upon these recommendations, the board voted not to endorse any such plan. The matter of the tunnel station on Figueroa street was first brought to the attention of the Chamber of Commerce by W. E. Evans, attorney, who acted in behalf of the Jonathan club of Los Angeles.

Flood Control

Percy J. Hayselden, chairman of the flood control committee of the Chamber of Commerce, announced that his committee would meet for a thorough discussion of the Sycamore canyon problem within the next few days after which a recommendation will be made to the board of directors. Co-operation of service clubs and the Realty board will be sought. Later it is probable that a mass meeting will be called for the Broadway High school auditorium when the recommendations of the chamber will be submitted and the question of a tunnel or the completion of the Sycamore Canyon drive project will be definitely thrashed out. All possible speed in reaching an agreement between factions in Glendale was urged at the meeting last night so that a solid front favoring one project or the other can be made before the County Supervisors when the flood control matter comes before them on February 17.

A program of advertising to make known to Southern California cities that Glendale possesses a transportation advantage over other communities will be worked out by the transportation committee under W. T. Jefferson. Mr. Jefferson pointed out to the directors last night that passengers for all points north and east can board and leave the Southern Pacific trains at the Glendale station instead of at Los Angeles and save much time by avoiding downtown traffic in getting to their respective outlying cities. He declared his belief that if this fact were generally known, many thousands of travelers from surrounding cities would take advantage of this time-saving feature.

University Site

Director George J. Lyons will represent the Glendale Chamber of Commerce at the meeting of regents of the University of California at Los Angeles tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock, when a site for the new southern branch of the university will be considered. The position of Burbank in the fight to secure the school has been materially strengthened, Mr. Lyons told the board, by an additional offer by the city of 200 acres more free ground. This brings the total free acreage offered by Burbank to 400 acres with 800 acres to be had at a nominal charge of $500 per acre. Glendale will continue to actively back the choice of the Burbank site.

Attention of the board was called to the new electrically lighted sign advertising Glendale business and manufacturing districts which has been erected at West Broadway and San Fernando road by Lloyd H. Wilson in his report for the chamber industrial committee.

A letter from Glendale Post, American Legion, thanking the chamber for the assistance rendered in building the Legion float which took second prize at Pasadena New Year's day, was read. A second communication from the Rose Tournament committee, expressed the gratitude of the Pasadena body for Glendale's splendid entries in the parade. L. W. Chobe, float builder, rendered a report on his work for this year to the board. President D. H. Smith extended the appreciation and thanks of the Chamber of Commerce officially to Mr. Chobe.

DIRT FARMER'S PRIDE 'LOST' IN KANSAS

Jonathan M. Davis Steps Out Of Governor's Offce Under Cloud

By J. C. JOHNSON

Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 14.—Jonathan M. Davis, dirt farmer, pride of the native Kansan two years ago as governor-elect, today stepped from that office to give way to the new governor under the same sort of cloud that hung over the head of another contemporary farmer in ofice, former Governor Warren T. McCray of Indiana.

Both dirt farmer executives entered office as proteges of the agriculturalists, pledged to bring aid and comfort to the man of the soil. Both left office charged with a prostitution of its powers.

Governor Davis turned the election of 1922 into a Democratic landslide. His choice was a gala day for the farmer, and down in Bourbon county, his home county, the rustics gathered to crack a line or two about how "Jonathan will show them fellers how to operate the state house."

Reign Stormy One

He was to bring in an era of good times and general good will under farmer rule. Instead, the Davis reign has been one of the stormiest in the history of the state. At the outset he began by fighting the legislature, overwhelmingly Republican. He removed officials who had not completed their terms. The supreme court defeated this move.

Next came a crack at the state industrial court, but here again the governor lost. Continual warring with the legislature accomplished nothing his first year in office.

Two years of his doings resulted in denouncement by the same farmer vote that in 1922 had so overwhelmingly approved. The farmers sent Ben S. Paulen, Republican and "city feller" to the executive chair.

Frees Many Convicts

It was then that the granting of pardons in wholesale fashion was begun by Governor Davis. With the end of his term near as many as ten convicts a week were liberated from the penitentiary. The release of a murderer, a convict banker, a highway robber and other criminals came so closely on the heels of one another that the Kansas City Journal Post began its inquiry.

Just three weeks after that investigation started the paper arranged the setting that resulted in the catch of Russell G. Davis, the governor's son, in the act of accepting $1,250 in connection with a pardon from his father to Fred W. Pollman, convict banker

According to the petition, a rule at the school forbids the children leaving the school grounds for lunch unless they go to their homes and stipulates that the pupils purchase their lunches at a cafeteria maintained by the school. The plaintiffs allege that the food sold by the school was not fit to eat and that when their son attempted to leave the grounds at meal time he was restrained by the principal.

WAR!

A Series of Seven Articles on War: With a local-civic objective by "Mr. A. Studious Veteran."

Article Six

For hundreds of years, a stupendous movement involving supremacy between the white and non-white populations of the world has been in remorseless progress. The white races, outnumbered thousands to one, have dominated the world. Slowly but surely the repressed and suppressed non-white peoples have been developing mentally and acquiring cohesion. What will occur when the hundreds of millions of Chinese and Indians of Asia reach the economic development of Germany? Recent Japanese history provides "Mr. A. Studious Veteran" an inkling as to the answer.

In our own country, what changes have occurred in the standards of patriotism and respect for law and order from 1800 to 1925? No answer is necessary "to him who runs and reads," but the why of lowered national tone and increase in crime may not be so well known. Among the horde of aliens coming to our shores—people not nurtured under American standards, people not assimilable with the native stock are to be found 90 per cent of crime and poverty, 80 per cent of the inmates of poor-houses, insane asylums and penitentiaries, of the blind and beggars. Likewise among the 24 per cent of illiteracy in the nation, 90 per cent of these are of the alien class.

Further, as already pointed out, profiteering and evasion of civic duty are rampant, the cause for which may be found in the general avarice and lowered moral tone.

In line with this—the United States, although the wealthiest and least hurt was the last of all the warring nations to attempt some adjustment in the compensation of its veterans—then handed them a tomb-stone—after death benefit—colder than a dog's nose. Even this was largely due to the financial avarice among the profiteering interests.

It is of mournful interest that according to the government's Veterans' Bureau, there are 35,000 dependent war-orphans for whom practically no provision has been made. There are also tens of thousands of tubercular and mental invalids inadequately cared for five years after the war.

Another feature inviting thought is the flood of legislation throughout tthe country calculated to lower respect for law and the standards of Americanism. Likewise communist and anarchist openly and brazenly flout the law and it is singularly difficult to convict, punish or deport these grewsome parasites.

The American Legion and Auxiliary, through local, state and national bureaus and committees are bending every effort to ameliorate all these defects in civic affairs, and upholding American traditions and institutions.

Educational week fostered and promoted throughout the nation, hearty endorsement and promotion of scout troops and movement, constant work to counteract illiteracy, have become second nature to the veterans. They believe and strive to make effective that only by selection and restriction in immigration combined with education in citizenship and ridding the country of undesirables can the insidious evils of communism be combated. They believe in meeting and combatting the "rising tide of color" at the borders and not from within our gates.

The Legion is actively engaged in establishing a fund of $5,000,000 for institutional care and education of dependent war orphans. Can there be a more worthy ambition than this? It also, night and day, works for the welfare of the disabled and distressed. As an example—Los Angeles county posts and auxiliaries maintain a bureau of relief and employment in Los Angeles which in December, with an expenditure of nearly $5000 did what it could for 1280 applicants.

One of the most important items of national welfare work on the program for this year is the passage of the "Universal Draft bill" which in case of war or national peril would render the entire resources of the country available for defense.

This bill would give the government power to fix prices for all commodities, make profiteering impossible, draft man power not only for fighting but for labor, commerce and every factor in the life of the country and draft wealth, factories, banks—everything, and all on an equal basis with no need to adjust compensation afterward.

This is not a make-war measure, but by thus removing the profit incentive from war, it is the greatest inducement for peace the mind of man has evolved. The only other incentive to war so far disclosed, the Legion also constantly frowns upon, i. e., the professional-soldier-officer class such as was the deciding factor in autocratic, imperial Germany. However, the Legion firmly believes in a highly trained nucleus in a small but adequate army and navy for emergency work and as instructors of a democratic citizen militia, sufficiently prepared not to go into the field as raw troops, usually the flower of the nation, to be mown down and sacrificed with no chance to render due account of themselves or for their country.

In the passage of this vital bill and great incentive to peace, every reader can help by studying it carefully and exercising his influence on public opinion and legislators. Do it by all means.

These are but a few among many of the civic reasons why those who are eligible should be members in the Legion and auxiliary and why those who are not should help locate others who should be in and help the common cause.

A telephone call, Glen. 92, or a postal to Adjutant E. E. McWain, 610 East Broadway, Glendale, will help the veterans, the city and nation.

Tomorrow "The Social Side and Why."

Better Cattle Market Expected Over Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 14.—"There is an immediate prospect for better cattle markets, especially for finished beef," said J. H. Mercer, state live stock commissioner today. "This does not mean a boom is expected. The Kansas hog population has dropped off noticeably due to high priced corn and considering present stocks 1925 should see favorable hog prices."

FLOAT AWARDS AROUSE IRE OF CITY

Dissatisfaction Is Expressed With Pasadena Action; Local Fete Planned

Glendale will probably not enter any more high-priced floats in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses, but instead will take steps to establish an annual fiesta day and celebration in this city, as a result of an agitation started through the Chamber of Commerce by Lloyd H. Wilson, realtor, and others.

Opposition to the expenditure of large sums on floral floats, was voiced on several sides in recent months, has welded into an organized force since the Glendale butterfly float of 1925 failed to take first prize in the sweepstakes at Pasadena on New Year's day. Opponents of the float idea contend that "the small amount of advertising secured for Glendale is by no means commensurate with the money expended and that the funds could be used to much greater advantage in staging a strictly Glendale celebration."

"Glendale's Horn"

Mr. Wilson appeared before the directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night and outlined preliminary plans for some sort of fiesta in this city which, he said, would be "blowing Glendale's horn with Glendale money rather than that of an outside city." He pointed to the inestimable advertising value the Mardi Gras has been to New Orleans, and other similar events to other cities. He said the time has arrived when Glendale should have the individuality gained through some such institution and that this city is now the proper size for promotion of an annual festival, neither too large nor too small. The affair could be made to render a profit within a short time rather than prove a money loser.

Secretary Howard I. Wood of the chamber, heartily backed the suggestion of Mr. Wilson today, declaring he believed even a small local celebration would be of much greater advertising value than entering of a float costing a large amount in the Tournament of Roses.

President D. H. Smith also expressed himself in favor of such

STOCKOWNERS SHOW HOTEL STANDING

Glendale Hostelry Owners See Bright Future for New Addition

The stockholders of the Hotel Glendale, Inc., at their annual meeting last night in the First Methodist Episcopal church, 144 North Kenwood street, returned the board of directors to office for another year; adopted the financial report of T. H. Menk, showing $205,000 excess of assets over liabilities, and approved the report of the auditing committee, rendered by R. M. Brown, chairman. Approximately 100 stockholders were present, representing a large majority of shares outstanding. The meeting was presided over by C. W. Ingledue, president of the board. It was preceded by a banquet.

At a meeting to be held today in the offices of the company, 633 East Broadway, the board of directors of the Hotel Glendale, Inc., and of the holding company, known as the Ambrosini Hotel Co., will elect from their midst officers for the ensuing year. The names of the directors follow: C. W. Ingledue, Mrs. Mabel L. Tight, T. H. Menk, C. F. Stuart, S. S. Kinch, R. E. Spicer and Dr Henry R Harrower.

Owen C. Emery, attorney for the corporation, outlined the financial aspects of the investment, stating that the superintendent of banks for the state of California has declared the bonds of the Hotel Glendale, Inc., legal for savings banks. He prophesied that in two years the stock of the corporation will be selling from $50 to $75 above par.

Prominent Endorsements

Mattison B. Jones, a prominent Los Angeles attorney and Glendale resident, made the principal address, commending the unusual labors of the board of directors of this corporation and declaring that they were animated by a desire to afford people visiting this city a first-class hostelry.

From a business standpoint, Mr. Jones said, the shares of the corporation constitute a good investment, for the assets are so far in excess of the liabilities and the excess land held by the cor-

SEEK WORLD PEACE, IS PLEA TO WOMEN

Tuesday Afternoon Club Members Hear Traveler Urge Organization's Aid In Preventing Another Conflict

By KATHERINE V. SINKS
Of The Evening News Staff.

"War is not as far away as many of us think. There are more armed men today in Europe than at the beginning of the World war. And what are American women going to do about it? I sincerely believe that if the 12,000,000 organized women in America demand peace they will get it."

This was the eloquent declaration of Mrs. Nancy M. Schoonmaker, well known American club woman and world traveler, before the Tuesday Afternoon club yesterday.

Mrs. Schoonmaker returned recently from a tour of Europe as an appointed representative of the General Federation of Women's clubs and the National League of Women Voters. Her subject was "International Obligations of American Women" and in her vivacious, witty and altogether engrossingly entertaining way, she brought to Glendale women what might be accomplished by "putting a little of woman's point of view into legislation."

Internationally as well as nationally, women are assuming an ever-increasing prominence, she declared.

Plan Series Of Talks

Glendale is to have a course of six lectures by Paul Harvey, publisher of the "International Interpreter" and lecturer on international relations, who will come to Glendale under the auspices of the Tuesday Afternoon club.

Mr. Harvey was one of the featured speakers at the biennial convention last June in Los Angeles, and in addition to giving a course of lectures at the University of California, he has been lecturing in various cities of the southland.

Although the local club is going to great expense to bring Mr. Harvey to Glendale, club executives are confident that crowded auditorium will greet the speaker at each address.

Yesterday Mr. Harvey, introduced by Mrs. A. H. Montgomery, spoke on the "Importance of Understanding Public Affairs." A fluent speaker, Mr. Harvey greeted his hearers with the declaration that he is confident that women's votes are going to count for more than mere votes in the ballot box." In discussing war and world peace he said: "If we are going to eliminate war we must do more than pass peace resolutions. It is the fear of nations that is the underlying cause of war. This national fear can be done away with by establishing international justice." Mrs. A. L. Ferguson, chairman of international relations of the club, is receiving reservations from club members and friends for Mr. Harvey's lectures, to be given the first week in February.

Tell Of Trips Abroad

Mesdames Mattison Boyd Jones, Mabel S. Rudy and T. F. Pierce, members of the Tuesday Afternoon club who recently enjoyed travels abroad, were speakers yesterday at the club luncheon. In compliment to the three Mrs. Leroy Bosserman, who directed the community singing, with Mrs. Roberta T. Young at the piano, had the club company sing "Home Sweet Home."

The three speakers were introduced by Mrs. H. B. Woodill, curator of the Travel department of the club. Mrs. Jones, who with Mr. Jones and their daughter, enjoyed a five months' trip abroad, gave in her delightfully clever way, incidents of their trip. She spoke particularly of social and musical affairs they attended. Mrs. Rudy gave a brief sketch of the countries of the Mediterranean, while Mrs. Peirce read a beautifully written sketch of her sojourn in Italy.

Good Financial Report

Tuesday Afternoon club women heartily applauded Mrs. Homer D. Lockwood, second vice-president and chairman of ways and means, at the club meeting yesterday afternoon, when she presented the club treasurer with a check for $1,000, made by her committee since November 25.

In giving detailed report she stated that $125 of that amount was the percentage the club received last Friday night at the benefit performance of the Dobinson players.

Visitors At Gathering

Among guests yesterday at the Tuesday Afternoon club luncheon were Mrs. T. C. Gould, president of the Alhambra Woman's club; Mrs. Terry, chairman of junior membership for the Los Angeles district, and past president of the Anaheim Women's club; Mrs. Clark of Montreal; Mrs. Wagnor and Mrs. Martella Lane, California artists; Mrs. Williams of Bloomington, Illinois Woman's club; Mrs. Curtis of the Hollywood Woman's cub.

Entertained At Meeting

Mrs. W. A. Hatcher of Norborne, Mo., who has been spending several days visiting Mrs. N. M. White of 311 North Jackson street, was a guest of Mrs. White and Miss Hazel White at the Tuesday Afternoon club luncheon and meeting yesterday.

COMMENT by GIL A. COWAN

Glancing through the biennial budget presented the California Legislature, it is easy to see the constantly increasing cost of government, despite the governor's effort to make his administration economical and efficient. In so many words, one could say it has been that, but—

In another eighteen years the fixed charges, provided by the constitution and recurrent Legislature appropriations, will eat up all the revenue, this and other writers are pointing out, having had State Controller Ray L. Riley make estimates based on comparative increases of the last few years.

As it is, the governor only leaves a million or so for the Legislature to spend—the difference between the budget and the estimated revenue—and if the budget is not operated upon by the progressive element, anything which the governor has overlooked will have to come from that lone million dollars. In other words, the Legislature has little to say, any more, because for several sessions it was perhaps too prodigal.

All of which goes to prove the necessity for the public selecting their representatives with the greatest care and having men with proven ability, not alone in the state but the nation's affairs.

President Coolidge's selection of Ambassador Kellogg, former senator, as secretary of state to succeed Charles Evans Hughes meets with favor of editors in the northern section of the state whose papers I see. Kellogg has just completed a course in European diplomacy at the world capital in London. He has served his apprenticeship in the Senate and he comes from Minnesota without the baneful influences of financial and effete east coast.

In state appointments by Governor Richardson the latter has displayed good judgment in naming the most practical available men to various posts, but there is every indication he is having difficulty in drafting business men.

It is said, with some little authority, that George Squires, insurance commissioner, did not crave promotion to the state rail board because of his physical condition. And Ezra Decoto, Alameda county district attorney, was named likely because he was one of few competent men available, who was agreeable to the governor.

All of which goes to show the necessity for educating more people to government, if commissions and public offices are not to fall into the hands of incompetents.

It is said that Governor Tom Scrugham of Nevada has a program under way in his state for the consolidation of commissions and for the consolidation of many counties' public offices because of an absolute lack of people in the state to fill the various jobs and the inability of the taxpayers to pay their salaries if they should be imported

Government today might be compared to a 1914 model automobile which has been equipped with all the latest accessories and unable to move under their weight. The gears are being stripped in the effort to move the cumbersome machine, not only in California, but elsewhere.

And that's that.

BRIDGE DRIVE STARTED BY CHAMBER

Commerce Body to Join Improvement Societies To Span River

The Glendale Chamber of Commerce will actively join other chambers in the vicinity and improvement associations in seeking new modern bridges across the Los Angeles river to connect with the proposed Hyperion boulevard and other points. Representatives of the Glendale chamber will be present at a meeting at the Hollywood Athletic club next Tuesday night when representatives of the different chambers and improvement organizations will discuss the proposed bridge projects with members of the County Board of Suprvisors and the Los Angeles City Council.

Definite steps toward the securing of adequate bridge facilities to connect great highways of the San Fernando valley with main arteries of travel in Los Angeles, are expected to be taken at the meeting. Directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce, the Glendale Planning commission, members of the Citizens' Traffic commission and others in this city have shown themselves to be particularly interested in more bridge facilities across the river.

The proposed plan is to have sufficient appropriation placed on the ballot at the forthcoming general election in May in the form of a city and county bond issue to assure the two new bridges. Engineers and traffic experts will attend the meeting in addition to the many civic improvement association representatives, the supervisors and councilmen and members of the Los Angeles Planning commission.

In order that all directors of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce may have opportunity to attend the session, the regular board meeting will commence at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon instead of being held at night as is usually the custom.

Building Loan Associations

Of America are the only institutions which devote their efforts to the encouragement of thrift, saving and home-ownership—vital factors in the prosperity and welfare of the nation today.

Building and Loan Associations do not build houses. Their activities are limited to two distinct things:

1. Providing a means of safe and systematic saving—made profitable for the small as well as the large investor.

2. Making loans on the monthly payment plan for the building and buying of homes.

Every dollar placed in this Association by savers is loaned on first mortgages to prospective home owners.

Throughout America today about four billion dollars is loaned to home-owners by Building Loan Associations, assisting in the construction of over a million homes! This tremendous aid to our national welfare and prosperity has been made possible by 7,000,000 savers who now have their funds in Building Loan Associations.

TRIBUTE TO BOOTLEGGER

A newspaper, giving a column on the first page to the funeral of a murdered king of bootleggers the other day, said: "Six tall, mysterious men silently pushed their way through the throng at the funeral chapel yesterday afternoon and carried on stalwart shoulders the casket bearing the body of George Turner, slain ruler of mid-coast bootleggers, to a waiting hearse. Six pairs of strong hands, as they grasped the coffin, expressed with tender movements a devotion for a fallen leader. At the Calvary cemetery, where the body was laid to rest, the six strangers again stepped forward and reverently bore the flower-banked casket to the grave and bowed as the final service was read. At the close of the service they stood silent for a fleeting moment at the grave, as if in mute respect for a man they had known and had loved." And farther down the column we read: "As the sound of the closing prayer died out a pall of silence spread over the room. A tear dimmed the eye, cleared by the touch of handkerchief, and a stifled sob bespoke the grief of a true friend."

And on an inside page of the same paper there is recorded in a few paragraphs information of the death and funeral of a woman whose family has been prominent in that city for fifteen years. But there is no sob stuff here; only cold, hard facts. The tributes, these days, go to the law-breakers. The good citizens must be content with a few lines in an obscure corner of the newspaper.

DAMAGE TO CITRUS CROP

Recent frosts in Southern California damaged the citrus crop. There is no need to try to conceal this fact, for it is well known both here and in the east, but the extent of the damage is not known, and so is likely to be exaggerated in some quarters. Citrus experts have made a thorough inspection of the groves in Los Angeles, Riverside, San Bernardino and Orange counties and have reached the conclusion that the total loss of fruit in Southern California, both from wind and frost, will not exceed 25 per cent of the crop, and the higher prices resulting from the smaller crop will mean that as much money will be realized by the growers as would have been the case had no damage been done. And growers and shippers, they say, are generally united to protect the market against poor fruit.

Regarding the situation, a Riverside newspaper says: "Admitting frankly that considerable damage has been done, we are disposed to take a hopeful view of the situtaion. Excellent prices are prevailing on navels; and the present outlook is that good prices will be realized for all the fruit Southern California will ship. Certainly 75 per cent of a normal crop will be shipped; and the returns as a whole will make the season a very good one."

MUSSOLINI'S MISTAKE

Premier Mussolini is a man of unusual intelligence and power. He was the Moses who led the Italian people out of the wilderness of the bloc system in the Chamber of Deputies and from the menace of the red revolution, back to the workshop and offices and homes and normal living again. He did this with the help of his 300,000 loyal black-shirts and he won the confidence and the gratitude of the nation. A man with the personality and the power of Mussolini could, after guiding his country past the crisis, as he did, have re-established Italy's representative form of government, but, having tasted of the wine of absolute dictatorship, he has refused to relinquish the cup.

What a pity that Mussolini cannot see that he could retain a firmer hold on the hearts of his people by resigning his dictatorship than by attempting to hold the country in his power by force. At one time it seemed that this great leader was himself divinely led. How sad that by his own acts he should fall from his high pedestal. The world rejoiced when this leader was raised up in Italy's emergency, but no country can long flourish under a dictator.

COMEDY AND TRAGEDY

What a fine line is drawn between comedy and tragedy! What a queer quirk of human nature it is that enables us to see humor in a near-accident, a narrow escape from injury or death.

A man was crossing the street at a crowded corner the other day and did not see an approaching automobile until it was almost upon him. He demonstrated remarkable agility in a leap into the air, the car missing him by a hair's breadth. Everyone who saw the incident smiled and the women in the car that nearly ran him down shrieked with laughter. The man himself was the only one who didn't see the joke. If he had been one second later in his leap for life he would have been struck by the automobile and injured or killed. Then the mob would have been stricken with horror and the driver and occupants of the car would have registered terror and remorse instead of hilarity.

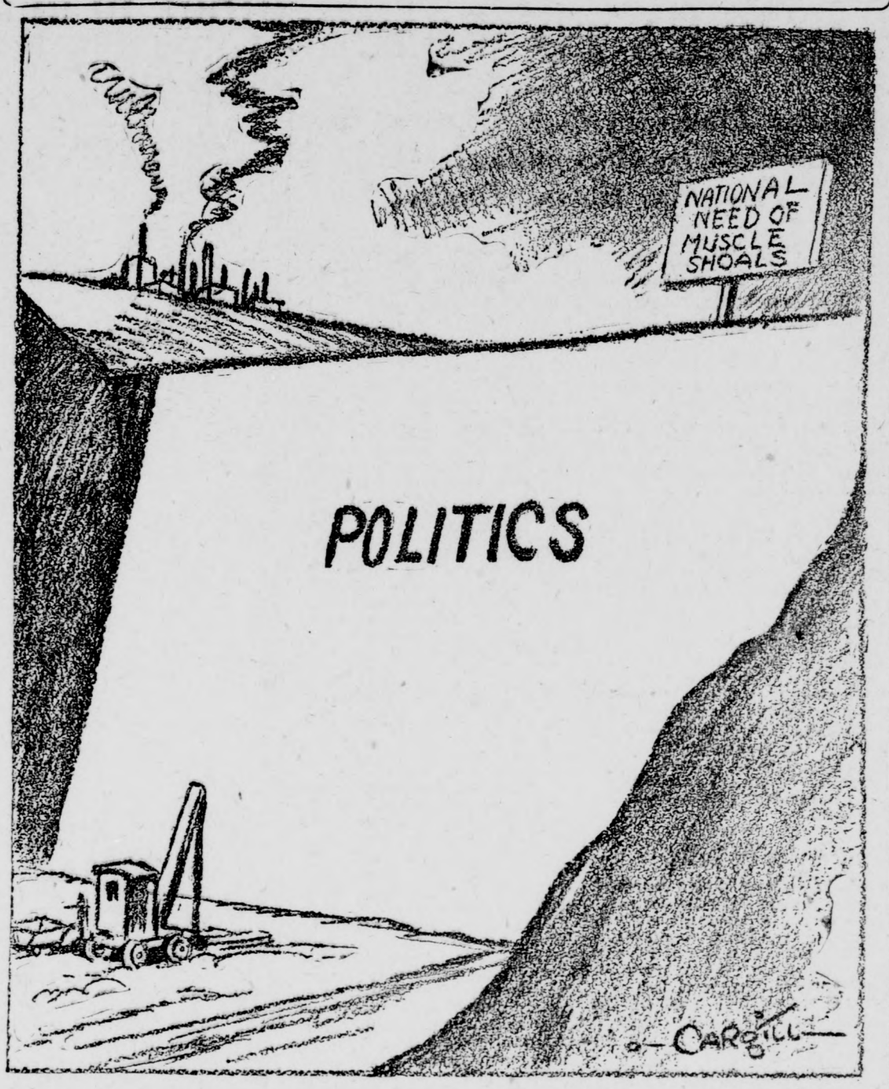
The line between comedy and tragedy is as faint and intangible as that which divides time and eternity. Perhaps it contributes to life and helps to keep us sane, that we can see comedy even when it borders so closely upon tragedy.

THE GOD SUCCESS

"America worships success," complains a Boston Rabbi who fears that admiration of successful men has reached a magnitude where it is a form of idol worship which leads to the surrender of all judgment of comparison and value. Of course there are many kinds of success, but it would seem the proper thing to admire determination and achievement in any line of worthy endeavor. Accomplishment rather than wealth is the emblem of success today. It is said that Henry Ford would be rated just as highly if he did not have so large a fortune. He is admired for his accomplishment and not for the wealth he has accumulated.

Success is defined as doing the best we can with our abilities and opportunities; not so much a matter of results as of character; not a goal to be reached, but a striving to accomplish our purpose. The man who is handicapped by physical ailments, inferior ability or any other cause and yet who never ceases to struggle and press forward is a success in the world, and we Americans admire him as much as we do the one who amasses great wealth.

DAMNED!



Another French Revolution

By DR. FRANK CRANE

When Leonid Krassin, the new Soviet envoy, came to Paris the other day, he was greeted in a speech by a Communist deputy by the words:

"The proletarian revolution has arrived in Paris, but we still have to fight as our brothers did in Russia."

A crowd of several hundred cheered this statement, and, upon indication of disorder, it was dispersed by the police.

There will be no revolution in Paris.

Revolutions are caused by somebody sitting on the safety valve. At present, under the French government, there is a good deal of liberty of action.

The best result of liberty is that it is a prevention to revolution. When people can talk all they please, and act about as they please, under certain restrictions, they are not inclined to revolt.

It is only when pressure is put upon them and there is an effort to batten down the hatches, so to speak, that revolution occurs.

Incidentally, the furs and jewels of Mr. Krassin and his party of ladies inside of the station were in strange contrast to the poorer dress of the Communists without.

Few people realize that Russia is not only in the hands of a government, but is also substantially in the hands of intense fanatics. The government works hand in hand with the "International." Its avowed purpose is to create dissatisfaction and revolution in other governments.

This feeling amounts almost to a religion. Russia is not only anxious to conduct its own affairs properly, but to make every other nation conduct its affairs in a way that suits her. It is essential to peace on earth to let every nation do as it pleases. The disposition of the Russians to interfere with the fundamental principles of other nations is a substantial cause of trouble.

There are two ways of going at the matter of achieving the unity of the world. One is to let every nation do as it pleases, and the other is to make all nations conform to the ideas of some certain one. The latter can never be accomplished, as it is impossible.

The idea of the ruling of the world on the American plan—that is, the plan of federation, where every nation is to mind its own affairs and cooperate with the others—is entirely possible, but the idea of making every nation accept the principles of government of some one special nation is out of the question.

Russia asked to be let work out her own salvation, and she should be willing to let other nations do the same.

The Best of Advice

By CLARK KINNARD

It should be remembered (by 100 per cent Americans in particular) that the reverse side of freedom is obedience, and without it there can be no freedom.

No one has stated this with more clarity than Calvin Coolidge. In his collection of speeches, published as "The Price of Freedom," you will find him saying:

"Independence is exceedingly exacting, self-control is arduous, self-government is difficult. . . This is the reason that to certain of our native-born and more often to our foreign-born, the American republic proves a disappointment. They thought that self-government meant the absence of all restraint, that independence meant living without work, and that freedom was the privilege of doing what they wanted to do.

"It has been a hard lesson for them to learn that self-government is still government, that the rule of the people does not mean absence of authority, that independence means self-support, and that complete freedom means complete obedience of the law.

"They are disappointed more than ever when they learn, as ever they do, that these are so, not because they have been decreed by some body of men, but that they are so by the nature of things, and all the governments in the world are powerless to change them."

"By the nature of things . . ." he says.

Men's condition is subject to inconveniences, and his existence is governed by superior powers; but those powers are neither the decrees of a blind fatality nor the caprices of whimsical beings.

Like the world of which he forms a part, man is governed by natural laws, regular in their course, uniform in their effects, immutable in their essence; and those laws "are not written among the distant stars, nor hidden in the codes of mystery, but are inherent in the nature of terrestrial beings, interwoven in their existence, and at all times and in all places they are present to him."

The quoted words are Volney's. As he says (in "Ruins of Empires") these laws act upon man's senses; they warn his understanding; they give to every action its reward or punishment.

"Let man then know these laws! Let him understand the nature of the elements which surround him, also his own nature, and he will know the regulators of his destiny."

Moreover, he will know the causes of evils and the remedies he should supply.

Greatest of all, he will know that statutes cannot insure righteousness.

Today's Poem

YOU'LL LOVE ME YET

You'll love me yet!—and I can tarry
Your love's protracted growing.
June reared that bunch of flowers you carry,
From seeds of April's sowing.

I plant a handful now; some seed
At last is sure to strike,
And yield—what you'll not pluck indeed,
Not love, but, may be, like.

You'll look at least on love's remains,
A grave's one violet:
Your look?—that pays a thousand pains.
What's death? You'll love me yet!—Robert Browning.

COMMUNITY SING OPENS TOMORROW

First of Series Promises Fine Musical Numbers By Glendalians

Exceptionally fine musical numbers will be featured during the community sing at the Glendale avenue schoolhouse tomorrow night when the Parent-Teacher associations in the southern part of the city will act as hosts.

The Glendale Trio, composed of Julius Kranz, violinist; J. Arthur Myers, cellist, and Mrs. Gertrude Erb, pianist, will give several selections and Mr. Kranz will also play a group of his own compositions. Vocal numbers will be given by Mrs. Harry McMullen, soprano, and by H. S. Robinson, tenor. All of these musicians are well-known artists with widespread reputations as leaders in their work.

The remainder of the evening will be given over to community singing, with J. Arthur Myers as leader. Mrs. Erb will accompany on the piano.

The community sing tomorrow will be the second of the 1925 series, which are being held in various points of the city, instead of in one central location. Next week the singers will meet at the Harvard High school auditorium and the following week in the Central avenue schoolhouse.

The meeting, which is open to the public, free of charge, will begin at 8 o'clock. All interested persons are urged to attend.

Hughes Resignation Is Explained As Personal

and now has served four years as premier of the cabinet.

Being 62 years old, Mr. Hughes has only a few years left in which he can actively engage in law practice. He never was a rich man. When he left the bench in 1916, he was not wealthy. In the ensuing four years he amassed a comfortable sum in private practice, but in March, 1921, he was called to the cabinet and the chances are he has dug deeply into his principal in the last four years. From now on he can recoup the losses of the last four years which would have been extraordinarily profitable to him. Having given twenty years to public service, he naturally thinks now of providing a continued income for his family.

While Mr. Hughes' reasons for resigning may be understood, there is no doubt that the appointment of his successor, Frank B. Kellogg, the ambassador to Great Britain, is causing more gossip and inquiry. How did it come about? Probably this way:

Mr. Hughes had been urging the president to accept his resignation. Mr. Coolidge was reluctant—almost unwilling, for he regards Mr. Hughes very highly—and all talk about minor or major disagreements may be set down as utterly unfounded.

"What shall we do for a secretary?" the president might have asked.

Hughes' Suggestion

"Well, there's Frank Kellogg at London," Mr. Hughes would naturally reply. "He is already familiar with the big question we now are dealing with. He has had experience in dealing first hand with European statesmen and he can take things over without difficulty."

To all of this Mr. Coolidge readily could have agreed and the appointment was announced. It is interesting also to point out in this connection that Hr. Hughes originally recommended Mr. Kellogg for the post at London. He has the highest regard for Mr. Kellogg's ability. And Mr. Coolidge has the same regard for Mr. Hughes' advice.

Most of the newspapermen, however, are frankly doubtful about Mr. Kellogg's capacity to handle the job of secretary of state. When Mr. Kellogg was a United States senator he revealed a nervous disposition. Public men are born with the faculty for handling newspapermen. They rarely acquire it. Mr. Hughes was the most successful secretary of state in this respect that Washington has had in a generation. He was courageous enough to discuss all manner of public questions with the press and the latter almost never misunderstood or misrepresented. Mr. Kellogg is just 68 years of age and responsibility weighs heavily upon him. Had he been named attorney general and Charles B. Warren as secretary of state, the general opinion here would have been more favorable. For Mr. Warren is a much younger man, an experienced diplomatist and a remarkable lawyer.

Judicial Temperament

Mr. Kellogg, on the other hand, is of a judicial temperament and as attorney general would have been in much more familiar surroundings than he will be in the department of state. For all these reasons there is a disposition to believe that Mr. Kellogg's appointment is temporary and that he will be secretary of state for not more than a year. He may surprise the skeptics, of course, but on Capitol Hill, where they know former Senator Kellogg, the belief is expressed that he will not want to continue after some of the weighty problems with which he is so familiar are disposed of.

CITY RATES HIGH IN MILK TESTS

Glendale Makes Excellent Showing, Report of State Officials

The Glendale Evening News is in receipt of the following communication from Dr. G. Kaemmerling, Glendale health officer, relative to milk tests:

In a signed statement from Dr. M. E. McDonald, market milk specialist, department of agriculture, state of California, Sacramento, Cal., the following information is given with reference to the milk supply of Glendale, which information was obtained at a Surprise Milk Scoring Contest held at the Glendale health department from January 6 to January 8, 1925:

Glendale starts the New Year with an official milk rating of 94.8 per cent, as determined through a surprise milk scoring contest just concluded by representatives of the bureau of dairy control of the state department of agriculture, Sacramento. The present rating is an excellent one, and is one of the highest received by any local health department in California.

A high quality of milk or other dairy product is never obtained through chance or neglect. In the present instance the results obtained are due to the administration given the milk-inspecting work by Dr. G. Kaemmerling, M. D., health officer, assisted by F. H. Sweet, milk and dairy inspector, and Miss Frances R. Stowell, bacteriologist, together with the splendid co-operation received from local milk dealers.

The improvement in the local milk supply during the administration of Dr. Kaemmerling as health officer is a remarkable one, showing an average improvement of over 10 per cent in less than two years' time, during which time Glendale had the distinction of receiving the highest rating of any city in the state.

Through the state-approved milk inspection as maintained by the Glendale health department, the milk consumer is assured at all times of receiving a safe product. The department is actually guaranteeing to the public that the milk is of the quality as indicated by the grade on the bottle cap.

The milk was scored on the basis of bacterial analysis, 35 per cent; flavor and odor, 15 per cent; sediment, 10 per cent; butterfat content, 15 per cent; solids not fat, 15 per cent; acidity, 5 per cent; bottle and cap, 5 per cent; making a total of 100 per cent. The results of the local laboratory for the past four months were included in computing the results, thus affording the public a reliable index to use in selecting their milk supply.

Judges officiating in the milk scoring were Dr. M. E. McDonald and Dr. G. U. Duckworth, market milk specialists of the state department of agriculture, Sacramento. The results follow:

Date of Contest, January 6-8, 1925.

General average score, 94.8 per cent.

Certified Milk—Adohr Stock Farms, 98.7; Ideal Certified Dairy, 98; Arden Certified Dairy, 97.7.

Guaranteed Milk — Calla Lily Creamery, 97.9; Burr Creamery Corporation, 97.8; Glendale Creamery, 97.2; Los Angeles Creamery, 96.5.

Grade "A" Raw Milk—Barnes Sanitary Dairy, 94.3; Danish Dairy, 93.9; Olive Grove Dairy, 92.9; Wilson Jersey Dairy, 83; Glenview Dairy, 81.6.

Grade "A" Pasteurized Milk (retail)—Sanitary Gold Seal Dairy, 96.9; Los Angeles Creamery, 96.6; Burr Creamery Corporation, 96.1; Glendale Creamery, 95.6; Calla Lily Creamery, 94.9; Crescent Creamery, 93.9.

Grade "A" Pasteurized Milk (wholesale)—Burr Creamery Corporation, 95.7; Glendale Creamery, 95.4; Danish Creamery, 95.2; Los Angeles Creamery, 93.3; Calla Lily Creamery, 92.6; Crescent Creamery, 92.

Goat Milk, Grade "A" (raw)—Warner's Goat Dairy, 94.35; San A Tog Goat Dairy, 91.55; Gray's Goat Dairy, 90.8; Goat-Airy, 88.7.

(Signed)
M. E. McDONALD,
Market Milk Specialist,
Department of Agriculture,
State of California.

It is earnestly requested that the above information be published in your valuable paper for the information of the Glendale public. This office receives many requests for information as to the results of the milk scoring contests, which shows that the public is very much interested. They usually state that recently they have seen nothing in the papers with regard to milk contests, which shows they watch the papers for this very information.

Very truly yours,
G. KAEMMERLING, M. D.,
Health Officer.

INVESTMENT FIRM IN SURPRISE MEET

McCormack Company Turns Business Into Banquet For Stockholders

Unique as a company without salaries, H. S. McCormack & Associates, Inc., investments, last night converted a stereotyped stockholders' meeting into a banquet and social gathering of sixty associates in the attractive Italian tea room at the Tuesday Afternoon clubhouse.

Featuring the meeting was the financial report on the operations of the company, showing that during the past fifteen months 20 per cent has been paid in cash dividends. In addition 20 per cent of the new profits have been set in reserve for surplus. It was also announced by the management that Stephen W. Huntington has underwritten the last $15,000 of the stock, to be placed on the market at $112.50 per share. This was given by R. T. Richardson of Hollywood, secretary-treasurer.

H. S. McCormack, president of the company, was master of ceremonies. He introduced as speakers, William W. Lee, president of the First National bank, and first vice-president of the associates; William McMillan, second vice-president of the associates; H. S. Laughlin of Los Angeles, attorney for the assoiates, and George Karr.

Broadcasting Stunt

A clever bit of broadcasting was done by Stephen W. Huntington, in announcing on an improvised radio, telegrams from associates in various parts of the country.

Samuel Jamieson was chairman of nomination, and upon his report officers of the company were unanimously declared re-elected. Officers are: H. S. McCormack, president; William Lee, first vice-president; E. C. Pendroy, second vice-president; William McMillan, director; R. T. Richardson, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Florence L. Huntington, assistant secretary.

Mesdames H. S. McCormack, Florence L. Huntington and Amy Jamieson composed the reception committee. Decorations were in charge of Mrs. Ruth Toll. The company gave a rising vote of thanks to Mrs. Homer D. Lockwood and her assistants of the Tuesday Afternoon club for the dinner served.

Mrs. Wagonner Speaks On Home Decorations

Mrs. L. D. Wagonner, artist and interior decorator, who moved recently from San Diego to Los Angeles, was guest speaker yesterday before the Fine Arts department of the Tuesday Afternoon club. So interested was Mrs. Wagonner in presenting her subject, and so charmed were her listeners that the entire time until the hour for the club luncheon was used. The speaker urged one central theme, around which home decoration should radiate. Mrs. Martella Lane, California redwood painter, was a guest at the meeting and later at the club luncheon. The department members have set January 31 as the date for their visit to Hanson Puthuff's studio in Eagle Rock. The Puthuff exhibit now hung in the banquet room at the clubhouse is being highly praised.

business principles. I assure you the American people are keenly interested in its success."

As the protocol defining America's share in the proceeds of the Dawes plan left the hands of the experts' committee late last night, it provided the following payments in settlement of costs of the American army of occupation and awards of the mixed claims commission:

First—Fifty-five million gold marks, or $13,750,000 annually until the costs of the American army of occupation ($240,000,000) shall have been paid. These payments will be a first charge in cash available under the Dawes plan after the charges of the German external loan of 1924 and the costs of the reparations commission, the inter-allied Rhineland high commission, the military control commission and the Danube commission have been deducted.

Interest on Balance

Second—Two and a quarter per cent of all the receipts from Germany via the Dawes plan in settlement of claims for war damage.

The United States agrees to waive its claims under the army costs Wadsworth agreement.

If the total sum paid in any year under the first clause falls below 55,000,000 gold marks, the balance will be carried over to the following year with interest at 4½ per cent.

The provisions for distributing of annuities received under the Dawes plan may not be altered without the United States' consent.

The United States is recognized as having a 2¼ per cent interest in that part of the annuities which may be distributed in the issuance of railway or other bonds under the experts' plan, or in the sale of such bonds.

Permanent roads are a good investment —not an expense

—and No Place to Go!

We find ourselves, almost without realizing it, a nation on wheels.

We drive or ride in 16,000,000 motor vehicles.

We pack the paved highways coming in and out of town. We over-run even so-called remote regions. And we are pounding to pieces all but permanent roads.

Next year 4,000,000 new cars will be on the road. Compared to this increase, the mileage of new permanent roads will be insignificant.

We don't want to be a nation on wheels, with no place to go.

The answer is, build more, and where necessary, wider concrete roads—and start building them now.

Not in a long time have general conditions been so favorable for carrying on such public works as permanent highway building.

Your highway authorities are ready to carry on their share of this great public work. But they must have your support.

Tell them you are ready to invest in more Concrete Highways, now.

The Wrath To Come

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM, Copyright 1924

CHAPTER XX

Blunn closed the door of the safe and returned to his place at the desk, carrying the box with him. He lit the electric lamp which stood upon the table and, with the other key, unlocked the casket. Its contents were simple enough in appearance—two small morocco-bound volumes resembling diaries at the top and a few sheets of parchment on which were several great seals; underneath a letter, yellow with age, crumbled a little at the corners, and showing signs of slight tears in one of the folds. With careful fingers Cornelius Blunn spread the latter out on the table before him. At either end he placed a small paperweight. Then he folded his hands and read its contents to himself in a very low undertone. The roar of the city seemed muffled by the closely drawn curtains. One thought of a dark and silent mosque in the middle of a sunlit Oriental city. Here was a man at his devotions—and this was what he read:

My Beloved Son,

I write you this message from my deadbed with the last fragment of strength with which an inscrutable Providence has endowed me. I go before my work is accomplished, and, for that reason, a heavier burden must rest upon your shoulders. You will bear it worthily because of the purpose. My son, the chosen people of God were often called upon to face suffering—aye, and humiliation. But in the end they triumphed. Greatness will always survive, and the greatest thing upon earth is the soul of the German people.

Have nothing to do, Cornelius, with those who would write her apologia. The empires of the world were built up with blood and sacrifice, and the knowledge of these things was in our hearts—we, who planned the war and believed that we should see Germany the ruling power of the world from Palestine to London. We struck too soon or too late. History may, perhaps, tell you. Next time the hour must be chosen so that failure is an impossible element.

All that shall happen in the future and the way to our glorious goal has been discussed between us many a time. My charge upon you is this. Remember the maxims of those who made Germany. The man whom you forgave will never forgive you. The man to whom you show a kindness will owe you a grudge for it. Hate your enemies in life, in death, and after death. When the time comes, every man and woman of the United States of America, of France, of England is your enemy. Never did the Philistines oppress and humiliate the children of Israel as these people have done the nation of His later choice. Show no mercy. Strip them—those whom you leave alive—of wealth, women and honor. Let them feel the iron in their souls which that accursed Treaty of Versailles has brought into the souls of our own people. When Germany strikes again see that she climbs forever to the highest place amongst the peoples of the earth. By the sword Germany came into being, and by the sword she shall fight her way to the chosen places. Farewell, Cornelius, and remember my last words. NEVER SPARE AN ENEMY OR MISUSE A FRIEND.

CORNELIUS BLUNN.

The sound of the man's low voice ceased. Yet for several moments he sat quite still. A breath of wind, coming through the opened upper part of the window, moved the curtains an inch or two, and a thin sharp shaft of sunlight fell like a glancing rod of gold across the table, resting for a minute upon his face. All that there was of coarseness, even the humanity of goodfellowship and humor, seemed to have vanished. Cornelius Blunn had become the prototype of his country, fashioned according to his father's mandate of blood and iron. He might indeed have posed, in those moments, for a statue of the great avenger. There was implacable hatred in every feature and line of his face, unmerciful. He was the incarnation of a real an dliving spirit.

The ceremony was over. With reverent fingers the letter was restored to its place at the bottom of the box. For a few minutes he pored over the contents of the two morocco-bound volumes. Finally he returned everything to the box, carried it to the safe, reset the latter's combination, and carefully locked it. Then he turned out the lights, drew back the curtains, lit a cigar and unlocked the door.

"Business as usual, Miss Herman," he said.

"Mr. Gurlenheim from the new London Steel Company is waiting to see you, sir," she announced.

A shadow of anxiety rested for a moment on Blunn's face.

"I will see him at once," he decided. "Count Itash too, immediately he returns."

Mr. Gurlenheim was a short, rather pudgy man, with flaxen hair streaked with grey, a guttural voice, and a fussy manner. He accepted a chair, but got up again directly.

"My friend," he exclaimed, as soon as he had shaken hands, "it is a serious matter on which I have come to see you. We have received a communication signed by the Secretary of the Limitation of Armaments Conference requiring a statement of all steel sold to Japan for the period of the last two years. We are asked to prepare it at once, as it may be referred to at the next meeting of the Conference."

TENT THEATRE

Arline Francis as Dolly in "Dolly of the Follies" is a riot, say audiences who have seen this latest offering of Toby Walters at his tent theatre on San Fernando boulevard, opposite the Moreland factory. The curtain rises at 8:15 o'clock nightly.

The plot is novel. It deals with a girl who left a rural town and joined the New York "Follies," where she underwent a great transformation. After ten years she returns to her home town, still young and charming, and sets the place buzzing.

The natives in general are shocked by her strange metropolitan mannerisms, but Toby Walters, featured as the farm boy, likes Dolly for all that and endeavors to transform his own sweetie into a Broadway model, silk-stockinged, short-skirted, bobbed-haired vamp. What Dolly finally does constitutes the big surprise of "Dolly of the Follies."

THE GLENDALE

THE T. D. & L.

Pola Negri in "East of Suez" opens today at the T. D. & L. Theatre.

DOBINSON PLAYERS

"The Hole in the Wall," with Mary Worth and Joseph McManus in the principal roles, will open tonight at the Tuesday Afternoon club theatre for its second week in Glendale, the curtain rising at 8:15 o'clock. This play, voted by the thousands who saw it last week as one of the weirdest ever seen on the Pacific coast, has for its underlying theme a spiritualism-mysticism motif, "faked" by a gang of super-crooks to gain their ends.

Mary Worth, in the role of Jean Oliver, a woman unjustly confined in a state prison, dominates the play. In order to secure freedom and vindicate herself, she associates with this crook gang, inspiring them to their mystic adventures through her own knowledge of spiritualism.

"The Hole in the Wall" was written by Fred Jackson, from whose high-priced pen have flowed a score of big Broadway hits. The present offering had a successful New York run, where it was hailed with such enthusiasm as the jaded eastern metropolis seldom accords any play.

GATEWAY THEATRE

Speaking of fast workers—Allan Dwan is right up on top when it comes to motion picture directors.

"Argentine Love" which opens today at the Gateway theatre, is his fourth production of Paramount's Famous Forty. The other three were "Manhandled," "Her Love Story" and "Wages of Virtue," all starring Gloria Swanson.

Bebe Daniels and Ricardo Cortez are featured in "Argentine Love," an original screen story by Vicente Blasco Ibanez. James Rennie heads a strong supporting cast which includes Mario Majeroni, Aurelio Coccia, Mark Gonzales, Russ Whital, Alice Chapin and Julia Hurley.

John Russell adapted the story for the screen. Gerald Duffy wrote the scenario.

Keep an eye out for Dwan's next production, "Madame Sans Gene," starring Miss Swanson. Dwan and his staff went to France to make this picture—Gloria's first costume production. The usual Wednesday added attraction of a splendid bill of selected vaudeville is presented.

About the only thing left that haven't been called un-American are the names "Smith" and "Jones."

Uncle Wiggily

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S CROSS WORD PUZZLE

Once upon a time, as Nurse Jane came back from the moving picture show and hopped into the hollow stump bungalow, she saw Uncle Wiggily sitting in a chair by the window.

"For goodness sakes!" cried the muskrat lady housekeeper. "Haven't you been out adventuring today?"

"No," answered Uncle Wiggily, "I haven't," and he never looked up from a paper in his paw, but stared at it and bit the end of a lead pencil.

"What are you doing?" went on Nurse Jane. "Are you going to play checkers with Uncle Butter?" For the paper the bunny gentleman held was marked off into black and white squares, something like a checkerboard.

"No checkers," answered Uncle Wiggily. "I'm trying to work one of those new things called a cross word puzzle, my dear. Can you tell me a word of three letters that you do when you're hungry?"

"Well aren't you going to eat?" laughed Nurse Jane. "That's what everyone does—when they can."

"Hurray! That's it. Eat is the word I need to fit in my puzzle!" shouted the bunny, and quickly he wrote the three letters down in the white spaces. Then he went on staring at the paper and biting his pencil, and Nurse Jane said:

"Well, aren't you going toeat."

"Not until I finish this cross word puzzle, Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy."

Nurse Jane sighed. She had never seen Uncle Wiggily like this before. Always, on other days, he had twinkled his pink nose and gone adventuring. Now he sat in the bungalow and puzzled over the puzzle.

"Hey, Nurse Jane," cried the bunny. "What's a word of six letters made out of milk and mice like it?"

"Why, cheese, of course," answered Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy.

"Of course," shouted Mr. Longears, quickly writing it down. "I should have thought of Jollie and Jillie Longtail, the mice, and then I would have remembered cheese. But my puzzle is nearly done."

Then he sat there, and Nurse Jane began to get worried, thinking perhaps she had better send for Dr. Possum, for cross word puzzles might be catching, she thought.

And then, all of a sudden, as Nurse Jane looked into the room where Uncle Wiggily sat, she saw something that almost froze her tail. For creeping softly up behind the rabbit's chair was the Fuzzy Fox. The bad chap had slipped in when Nurse Jane forgot to lock the door.

"Oh, this is terrible," whispered Nurse Jane. "Uncle Wiggily doesn't know the Fox is there and, in a moment, the bad chap will nibble the bunny's ears. Oh, what shall I do?"

But before she could do anything the Fox made a noise. Uncle Wiggily jumped up, saw the bad chap, but, instead of being afraid, the rabbit cried:

"Quick! Give me a word of three letters meaning something good to eat."

"Pie," barked the Fox. "That's easy. But now give me a word of five letters which means something that you sweeten your tea with."

"Sugar," cried Uncle Wiggily.

"That's easy. But say, are you doing cross word puzzles, too?"

"Sure I am!" laughed the Fox. "Are you?"

"Can't keep me away from them," chuckled Mr. Longears. "What's your sixteenth vertical." And then the Fox told him, and the two sat down there and began doing cross word puzzles together.

"Well, of all the things I ever heard of, this is the queerest," said Nurse Jane. "That Fox never so much as mentioned ears. Cross word puzzles are wonderful." And, for the first time in many years, the Fox and the rabbit were friends. But it didn't last long.

And if the feather duster will tickle the rice pudding under the chin to make it laugh when it dances with the marmalade, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's football.

Diet And Health

THE BENEFITS OF EXERCISING

Have you thought of physical exercise simply as a means of strengthening the muscles? That is but one of the benefits.

Exercise not only affects the muscles but has a decided beneficial effect on all of the organs of the body. Let me tell you how this results, then you will see the advisability of adding an exercise period to your daily program if you have not already done so. And if you have, then I will strengthen your resolve to continue it when your interest flags.

I will take the effect of exercise on the muscles first to show you how the whole system is involved and benefited.

When muscles are used there are both physical and chemical changes in them. The physical change consists of a contraction and thickening, followed by a relaxation or elongation to normal position. This causes a pressure on all of the structures in them,—the muscle and fat cells, nerves, blood and lymph (the tissue fluid) and results in an automatic pumping of the blood and tissue fluid into and out of the muscles, thus quickening the circulation and bringing in fresh arterial blood and sending the venous blood containing the waste products, onward. This means, of course, better nourishment and better elimination of wastes in the cells and improvement of the "tone" of the muscles (ability to contract quickly when called upon).

Muscles that are not exercised loses this tone. They become shrunken, flabby and weak; in other words, they atrophy (the word "atrophy" means "without nourishment"). This is strikingly shown in muscles that have lost their power to contract through loss of nerve control, as in paralysis, or through some injury that prohibits their use. We know that muscles that are used frequently do just the opposite to this—they develop and become stronger. The strong arms of blacksmiths and others who use their arms in their work, and the general muscular development and strength of athletes testifies to this.

The physical change caused by exercise not only affects the muscles but the bones to which their ligaments are attached. The pulling to which they are subjected by the contraction of the muscles has a great deal to do with their development, especially in youth.

To exercise the muscles, joints are put into play. This exercises them, keeps them supple, and the strengthened muscles can hold them in their normal position. Exercise which strengthens the muscles attached to the spinal joints has a great deal to do with correct posture, and correct posture is a big factor in maintaining normal health because of its part in keeping the vital organs of the chest, abdomen and pelvis in their proper positions.

The physical activity in the muscles calls for chemical activity with a greater demand for oxygen to furnish the spark for the increased oxidation or burning that goes on. This means that there is a greater demand for oxygen throughout the body and therefore more oxygen has to be taken in through the lungs and the respiration is quickened. You know how much faster you breathe when taking exercises. This chemical change which takes place in the muscles—it is called internal or tissue respiration—causes more or less of a chemical change throughout the body, and all the organs are stimulated indirectly to a greater activity—the nerves, the heart, lungs, brain, liver, all the glands of internal secretions—in fact, every organ and tissue in the body is beneficially stimulated by wise exercise. You cannot improve one set of organs without improving the others because all of the organs of the body are interdependent.

I think I have given you in a brief summary enough reasons to make you realize the importance of physical exercises. We will continue this discussion on exercises tomorrow.

Tomorrow—Reducing Without Dieting.

My Dear Followers:—When sending for material which we offer you please remember to enclose a stamped envelope bearing your full name and address. The pamphlet on reducing and gaining is the only one for which you must enclose four cents in stamps extra. Address your letters to me in care of this paper. Make them as brief as possible, not over 200 words, and type or write them legibly with ink. Please sign your name as evidence of good faith—we will not use it in any way. Remember it is impossible for me to diagnose for you or to answer you personally. I appreciate very much the beautiful letters you send me and regret it is impossible to give you individual advice. The questions you ask will be answered in the column as soon as possible; if they are of general interest. Don't forget the s.a.s.e., if you expect me to send you the information I have offered.

Chats On Beauty

By EDNA KENT FORBES

EYEGLASSES

Once I knew the percentage of women who wore eyeglasses all the time. I've forgotten now but, anyway, it doesn't matter. The point is that people believe eyeglasses make women look older, and plainer, therefore every woman is concerned to find the sort of glasses that will make her less old and less plain.

It's odd how eyeglasses lend an air of character. Only Americans wear the tortoise shell rim kind; abroad, you can spot an American anywhere on the streets because of them. On the English and French stages, every American character is played wearing tortoise shell rims, which go oddly with the continental imitation of nasal American or American-pronounced French. The appearance of the tortoise shell rims is enough to start a laugh.

I wonder why. Tortoise shell rims, for some reason, are the most becoming type of eyeglasses. They will let a young girl still look like a young girl whereas old rims or rimless glasses would make her seem a school teacher, or a mature woman. They add character and decision to a vacant nondescript face; indeed, I know one man who wears them simply and solely because he looks so very intelligent, and he isn't at all. He's got just intelligence enough to know how much he lacks. Upon reflection, I think that shows a good deal of cleverness, but that has nothing to do with eyeglasses.

I believe tortoise rimmed glasses are becoming because they add a frame to the eyes, and therefore emphasize them. Plain glasses hide the eyes, and plain glasses are associated in our minds with teachers, doctors, and such; tortoise shell rims with artists and writers. The fact that the "rims" are nearly universal now makes no difference.

The only trouble is that the

Sometimes They Are Becoming

"rims" are ugly with hats. But that has to be put up with. I'd always advise them.

G. C. H.: For hair to become harsh and straight after it has always been soft and waxy, I should trace to a change in climate; or there might be a great change going on in the system. Possibly this is the explanation as the woman is 56. When the general health is good, and the scalp kept loose with a good circulation maintained, it would be a rare case not to have a becoming amount of hair, no matter what the age of the person is.

Ruth M.: You cannot treat a serious skin disease yourself. I am suggesting that you go to one of the hospitals where they specialize in skin troubles.

I believe that "Hamburg Steak" has kept down more food budgets than any other meat dish. Not because this chopped beef is necessarily cheap per pound. But because the housewife can buy it in small quantities. Every saving woman knows that the three great methods of keeping down food expenses are (1) pay cash for everything; (2) when you buy meat, buy it in small amounts, only a pound or two at a time (it's the big roasts that cost!); (3) use meat substitutes often in place of meat—that is, cheese eggs, milk, baked beans and other protein foods.

But, if we are to use Hamburg Steak frequently, we should know how to serve it in many ways, to avoid monotony. Here are a few of the most delicious:

Baked Macaroni-Hamburg Dish: (This is a little one-dish dinner in itself. All you'd need to make it a well-rounded meal are a salad and a fruit dessert.) Boil one-half pound of either spaghetti or macaroni in salted water to cover, and when tender drain it and put a portion of it into a baking dish. The other ingredients are one pound of Hamburg steak, four peeled and minced onions, one can of tomatoes, one-half cup of grated or finely chopped mild American cheese and salt and pepper. Sprinkle a little of the raw chopped meat over the layer of cooked macaroni; season with a pinch of salt and pepper, add a sprinkling of the raw chopped onion, then a layer of the canned tomatoes and some grated cheese. Repeat these layers till all your ingredients are used. Cover all with buttered crumbs and bake in a moderate oven for forty minutes. Serve at once.

Hamburg Italian Style. The ingredients are one and one-half pounds of chopped beef, three peeled and minced onions, one green sweet pepper previously parboiled with seeds removed, two tablespoons of beef drippings, a few drops of Worcester sauce, two tablespoons of tomato catsup, salt and pepper. Fry the onions and chopped pepper in the drippings and when a light brown add the meat and the seasonings (put all into a bowl and shape into small cakes). Now return these cakes to the frying pan and cook them through, browning them well. Serve with the tomato catsup poured over them, heated, with the Worcester sauce added.

Rice-Beef Loaf: Mix together one pound of beef cut from lower round and ground, two minced onions, one green parboiled pepper chopped, one tablespoon of tomato catsup, one-half teaspoon of salt, and one cup of water. Bake this in a loaf cake pan for twenty minutes in a hot oven. Then spread over the meat three cups of cold boiled rice, dotted with bits of butter, and bake for forty minutes longer in a moderate oven. Serve hot.

M'LARNIN GIVEN NOD OVER FIDEL

Ten-Round Event Turns Out To Be Real Battle In Last Three Rounds

VERNON RESULTS
Jimmy McLarnin won over Fidel La Barba, 10 rounds.
Johnny Lamar won over Julius Jessick, 6 rounds.
Ernie Owens won over Young George, 6 rounds.
Bobby Bridges won over Sailor Ashmore, 4 rounds.
Dutch Crozier won over Freddie Ellis, 4 rounds.

By A. S. HALL
Of The Evening News Staff.

With a ten-round main event that was fair to good in spots, but not enough spots, a six-round semi-windup that was a corker, a six-round special preliminary that kept the fans on their toes all the time, and two four-round bouts of more than passing interest, Jack Doyle christened his rejuvenated Vernon arena last night, and not packed 'em up, but turned 'em away.

The main event, between Jimmy McLarnin, "Dublin flash," and Fidel La Barba, former holder of the Olympic flyweight title, would have been a dismal failure had the two flyweights finished as they started. On the other hand, it would have been a world-beater of a three-round battle, for the most of the fighting was done in the eighth, ninth and tenth rounds.

For three rounds the two boys elected to amuse and entertain the spectators with a series of intricate dance steps, shadow boxing and Mexican jumping bean antics. In the fourth, after they had evidently finished training for the evening's entertainment, La Barba drove McLarnin to the ropes with lefts to the jaw, but McLarnin bored in. The fifth began to look more like a fight, ditto the sixth, and likewise the seventh.

Real Battle Starts

The real battle started in the eighth round, when La Barba came out of his corner anxious to follow up the slight lead he had piled up in the seventh by smacking the Irishman in the mouth. The L. A. A. C. lad took the round by a wide margin, driving McLarnin to the ropes with a series of lefts to the chin, mixed in with a few stinging rights to the body. McLarnin appearel slightly wobbly at the bell, but recuperated easily during the rest period.

La Barba tried to put over a knockout in the ninth, but was too anxious, swinging wildly and missing frequently. McLarnin took advantage of Fidel's wildness and evened up matters by pounding on La Barba's bleeding nose and face. La Barba tried constantly to connect a right uppercut with the Irishman's chin coming out of clinches, but missed all the time.

Both fighters advanced cautiously for the tenth round, and fans had visions of a repetition of any of the first three rounds. La Barba carried the fight to the Irishman after the first few preliminary dance steps, and his desire to score a knockout resulted in more wild swings, although many of his lefts to the head, crossed with a right to the body, connected. McLarnin pounded lefts to the jaw most of the round.

Out of Division

The visioned battle between the winner and Pancho Villa, flyweight champion, went by the boards when it was announced McLarnin weighed in at 119 at scale time yesterday afternoon. La Barba also exceeded the limit by one pound at 3 o'clock, tipping the Fairbanks at 115 pounds. Toby Irwin of San Francisco was the third man in the ring for the main event last night.

There was action, and plenty of it, in the semi-windup between Johnny Lamar and Julius Jessick, one of George Blake's boys. Lamar had too much ring experience for Jessick, appearing in his first battle since leaving the simon pure ranks. He fought a game battle, uphill all the way, and when Lamar set him back on his heels with a stiff left jab to the jaw, Jessick bored right in and delivered a few stinging blows himself. With a little more experience, Jessick will make some of the so-called good mitt-slingers wonder why the birdies are singing. The weights were announced as 135 pounds.

Ernie Owens came from behind in the sixth round and copped the verdict over Young George after an exciting battle. Owens rocked George in the opening stanza with a smash to the ear, and then chased him around the ring. The second round was even, but George came back strong in the third and fourth. They divided honors in the fifth and Owens put on his whirlwind finish to get the nod. The decision proved unpopular with the crowd, many thinking it should have been a draw.

Another Unpopular

The decision of Referee McGrath in the second preliminary, a four-round affair between Sailor Ashmore and Bobby Bridges, likewise fell upon unsympathetic ears. The sailor used a left jab most of the time, his right seldom getting into action. Bridges finished strong in the fourth. A draw verdict would not have hurt anyone.

Dutch Crozier proved too good for Freddie Ellis, who substituted for Louie Garcia. It was Crozier's fight all the way, and, although Dutch lacked the necessary amount of steam in the final frame to put over a knockout punch, he had Freddie worried considerably.

The enlarged arena was packed to the rafters last night, with a couple of thousand cash customers being turned away. Doyle announced that on February 8 Kid Kaplan, new bantamweight champion, would meet Bud Riley of Seattle in a twelve-round battle at Vernon. Three referees worked last night, Johnny Schiff handling the first preliminary, Larry McGrath taking the second, third and fourth fights, and Toby Irwin calling 'em in the main event.

ROCKNE CAN'T GO AS U. S. C. MENTOR

Irish Coach Says Report 'News to Him' That He's Leaving

OGDEN, Utah, Jan. 14.—Coach Knute Rockne of Notre Dame university, said here today there is nothing to the report that he would leave Notre Dame to coach at the University of Southern California. "Its all news to me," the coach said on his arrival here from California on his way east, when he was shown a news dispatch containing the report. Rockne said he had a ten-year contract at Notre Dame and only one year of that contract had expired.

Henderson Mentioned

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 14.—Elmer C. Henderson, coach at the University of Southern California, may be brought up for consideration by members of the special committee appointed to select a new coach for the University of Nebraska, it was learned here today. Members of the committee, however, said it was unlikely an invitation would be sent to Henderson to come clear to Lincoln for a conference.

Three men are now under serious consideration for the post. They are E. E. Bearg, assistant football coach at Illinois university, C. A. West, head coach at South Dakota State, and Chet Wynne, former Notre Dame fullback and now coach at Creighton university.

JOHN B. FOSTER'S VIEWS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The Pittsburgh Pirates will start active training in California on March 1, thus allowing themselves six weeks in which to warm up for the opening of the season. The principal reason for the early start is a desire to settle, for the time being at least, the personnel of their infield.

The Chicago Cubs are doing the same thing, and they also are to be at it in California. The conditions surrounding these two teams next season are unusual. Both were concerned in the biggest trade of the year between clubs and each, in making the trade, reversed the policy which has controlled its baseball affairs for some years.

The Cubs have been endeavoring to win a championship ever since Killefer became their manager, by using young ball players. Repeatedly they have refused to buy a known old timer who could kill the ball. It was a kid or nothing with Killefer. The Pirates, on the other hand, have been trying for the last five years or so to win a championship with old timers, and have had the pennant shot out from under them every time.

In the trade which was made between Pittsburgh and Chicago, the Pirates put three oldsters with Chicago, each of whom had made a reputation at Pittsburgh, but had got in wrong with the management. Chicago turned over two kids and a fairly seasoned pitcher to the Pirates. If the injection of young blood can help the Pirates, they may be on their way to a long sought pennant, and if the infusion of veterans can help Chicago, the Cubs may give the Giants a harder fight than they have had for some years.

The Pittsburghs have the bigger task and manager McKechnie knows it. He has an infield which is all new, so to speak, and which has capabilities of great speed if he can get it to working right. Traynor, Wright, Moore and Niehaus may work out to be the fastest infield that the National has known for years.

If Traynor can come back to the form he had in 1922, the left side of the Pirate infield should be a humdinger. Moore can bat and at times has played the infield as well as any of them, so that the chances are good for him. His real uncertainty is Niehaus at first base. Some old leaguers who are now in the southern association were asked what they thought of Niehaus and they were sanguine that Niehaus would give the Pirates as much strength as they had when Grimm played first for them.

Equally confident is Killefer that he has propped up the right side of his infield, which has been a drag on the Cubs for three years. Lack of a good second baseman and possession of a slow first baseman have kept Chicago from the fifteen or twenty games that are necessary to win a pennant.

Pittsburgh, however, is more anxious to get into the harness than the Cubs, because experimental part seems heavier for Pittsburgh, as the Pirates have a problematical kid infield while the Cubs have an infield of old stagers.

FLOWERS-DELANEY GO AROUSES FANS

New Middleweight Champ May Be Born In Graden Bout Friday

By DAVIS J. WALSH
For International News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—This man's town has lashed itself into a lather over the prospect of a new middleweight champion of the world being born at some early moment during the meeting between Tiger Flowers and Jack Delaney at Madison Square Garden Friday night. The boys are doing an Arthur Duffey to the box office in copious quantities.

They think the tiger is a black man eater and the memory of Delaney's knockout of Paul Berlenbach still lingers in the mental card index. Yet neither man is a champion and possibly never will be.

The general idea, however, is that Harry Greb has little in common with Tennyson's brook and cannot go on forever. If either Flowers or Delaney wins by a knockout on Friday, many of our citizens will rush into the night proclaiming the impending birth of a new king.

This is the way of the cash customer and it helps to maintain men like Tex Rickard in the style to which they are accustomed. The writer is not at all certain that either Flowers or Delaney is worthy of all the excitement he is creating.

Senator Asks Definite Action On French Debt

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The French debt situation was projected into senatorial debate when Senator Dill, Democrat of Washington, called on the French government to make a definite proposal to the United States for settlement of loans made during the war.

While declaring the French should enter a settlement agreement, Dill also demanded that the United States make liberal terms. He pointed out that the French loaned large sums to the American colonists during the revolutionary war and then had given the newly formed republic liberal terms of settlement.

LAWRENCE PERRY SAYS

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—An unusually large and representative gathering of delegates are in attendance at the annual meeting of the United States Golf association now in progress in this city.

But the above statement is based merely upon comparison. When one considers that the U. S. G. A. has 278 active clubs and 428 allied clubs on its membership rolls the number of delegates present is absurdly small.

It is quite true that the present meeting held forth nothing of consequence. There was no great issue to be settled, no ruffled feelings to smooth, no incipient combats to be throttled in the bud. Even had there been it is likely, judging from the past, that there would have been no rush to the meeting of club representatives from various parts of the country.

Indeed, in the fact that the present meeting is marked by a somewhat larger attendance than usual may be read something stronger than a hint that a prospective love feast—which is what the 1925 meeting promises to be—has greater drawing power than a forensic combat.

Then, too, the fact that no speeches were to be permitted at the annual dinner on Saturday night may have contributed to the pulling power of the current meeting. It is a wonderful thing to know you can go to a banquet and sit and eat and sing and tell stories without being punished by a dreary band of post-prandial orators who descend upon a dinner just when things are getting good and bury all good fellowship and the general joy of living under a turgid lava flow of words.

But, the fact that a fairly representative gathering of golfers are in session at the Hotel Astor should by no means be taken as suggesting that the number is at all satisfactory to the officers of the golf organization.

And in the corridors of the hotel today there has been a great deal of informal discussion as to how this condition may be rectified. It seems to be the idea that no better attendance can be looked for as long as the annual meetings are held at this time of the year. New York is a long way from a lot of the clubs belonging to the U. S. G. A. and many golfers at this time of the year are concentrating upon business to the end that when summer comes they will have affairs in such order as to permit them to get out upon the links with some degree of frequency.

It would not be surprising if the matter came up formally before the meeting adjourned, the impulse being a proposal that the date of the annual meeting be changed to the summer time, preferably in connection with the National Amateur Golf tournament.

There is a logical thought here and while the habit of the U. S. G. A. of moving deliberately in all things will in all probability check anything precipitate—provided the subject does come up in the form of a motion—it would not be surprising, were the idea to develop sufficient proportions in the course of ensuing months, that the change might be made at the 1926 meeting.

Nothing of a contentious nature is likely to come up at the sessions and since the nominating committee is making up its slate of officers recognized all the district golf associations in every section of the country—widespread applause has already been heard over the selections—everything in this respect should go through with a happy chime.

Find System, Hold It

FIGHTER ! EH ?
HIS EARLY AMBITION WAS TO BECOME A BIG LEAGUE SHORTSTOP
HE QUIT HIGH SCHOOL DURING HIS SECOND YEAR TO FOLLOW HIS RING CAREER AND MET WITH MUCH OPPOSITION FROM HIS FATHER
HE IS ONE OF THE YOUNGEST BOXERS TO HOLD A WORLD'S TITLE
EDDIE (CANNONBALL) MARTIN
HE RUSHES THE FIGHTING FROM THE FIRST BELL

By NORMAN E. BROWN
Written for The Evening News.

Eddie "Cannonball" Martin is sitting on the top of the world these days because he found a system that worked and stuck to it.

And until he is knocked on his silken tights for various and assorted counts in rings from Dan to Beersheba, he's going to stick to that system. All contenders for the world's bantamweight championship which he now holds might just as well read this and lay their plans accordingly.

Less than two years ago the new champion fought his first professional bout. He knew little about prize fighting, obviously. But he knew one thing. That was that he had had remarkable success in a brief amateur career with one plan of battle. That plan was to step out of his corner fighting and keep on fighting until the bell chased him back to it.

Finds His System

Martin used that system the first night he ever crawled into the ring, in a New York amateur tourney. He fought two battles that night and licked both opponents to a frazzle. He made the fatal mistake, however, of hitting the second one on the skull, and injured his hand so badly that by the time he was supposed to enter the third contest the fin wouldn't function.

When he entered the pro ranks the night of February 3, 1922, he remembered the system that brought him those early victories. He met Artie Downs, then a tough customer. Downs' experience enabled him to halt Martin's rushes and the new champ lost the decision. He lost another battle to Howard Marberry after that but still had faith in his system when he tackled Sammy Jackson a few days later. Jackson lasted just three rounds.

Pete Mack, Willie Clarkson, Bobby Wolgast, Jackie Marlowe, Harry Battling Leonard, Harry London and a half dozen other fighters were unwilling assistants in verifying his belief that his plan of battle was the proper one. So he carried on up to his fight the other night with Abe Goldstein, experienced miller and holder of the bantamweight crown.

Now the average fighter finds little time for the intensive study of psychology between his days of "playing engineer" and the birth of his desire to be a boxer, all high sounding chatter of the busy managers to the contrary notwithstanding.

The average youngster, though, does develop considerable respect for a champion and is inclined to proceed a bit cautiously when tackling a king in his own bailiwick.

Just Another Battle

If Martin had any such thoughts when he climbed into the ring with Goldstein the other night he failed to indicate it. All he carried in his head was the thought that his system ought to work again.

Goldstein stepped from his corner confident and eager to show his stuff. He expected Martin, the challenger, to come out cautiously even timidly.

Mr. Martin left his corner from the top rungs of his little stool.

Both feet and both hands were going when Mr. Martin arrived at the center of the ring where Goldstein danced. From that moment on the music Mr. Martin played with his leather mittens was too fast for Goldstein's feet. The champion quit his dancing and started in to save his kingly crown. Several minutes later a hometown crowd and referee agreed that Goldstein belonged with the ex-champions.

"If you find a good system, hold to it," muttered Martin as he left the ring.

And, just to show what habit will do in a man Martin, aware that he won the title by fighting for it, intends to keep it that way. He has already signed up for a battle this month.

The determination and confidence that Martin has given the dilapidated rank of the fight game is, by the same token, lost to the legal profession and baseball. Martin's dad wanted him to become a lawyer. Martin had drawn enough attention as a shortstop to command some attention in and around Brooklyn when he decided to enter the fight game as a business.

Sportdom All Over

By JOESPH L. KELLEY
Of The Evening News Staff.

Cecil De Mille, rumor has it, has or is going to leave sheltering roof of the Lasky studio on Sunset boulevard after a lot of years there. Cecil hasn't been exactly satisfied since an unknown in the person of Jimmie Cruze stepped in and made the 'Covered Wagon.' It was just about the time De Mille turned out the biggest 'flop' of his career—'Adam's Rib.' Maybe 'Adam's Rib' has been forgot. It's better forgot than remembered. Anyway Cecil rared up at the time and threatened to leave Lasky and Zukor flat. Now he's gone and done it according to reliable and unreliable sources. Cruze took a lot of wagons and made a money maker; De Mille couldn't beat him with a lot of Commandments.

Joseph L. Kelley

That's what Famous Players-Lasky outfit needs; a housecleaning. They need some new idea men in their studio. De Mille has virtually exhausted different angles from which to 'shoot' a bath-room scene and the various contrivances seen in the bath room. No place in this world or the next will movie fans ever be able to see bath-rooms like Cecil De Mille pictures. Try and find one.

De Mille started his bath-bath-room pictures when he showed Sir James M. Barrie what bum title writer he (Barrie) was by nonchalantly changing Barrie's title of 'The Admirable Creighton' to 'Male and Female'—or maybe this was doings of publicity forces.

At any rate fact remains that title of book that was known to millions; had received priceless publicity and was the work of one of England's greatest dramatists, was changed to the idiotic title of 'Male and Female,' meaning nothing from which ever end you start reading.

Now that these bath-room ideas have run out and De Mille can't think of any other kind of luxurious method Susie McTish, the beautiful blonde, can employ in taking her bath, there seems to have been a gradual let-down in De Mille's popularity with 'fillum' fans.

De Mille is over in Europe now, or en route, to look over their bath-rooms over there. He may come back with a big surprise in bath-rooms. It's worth waiting for—that new bath-room scene.

De Mille's changing the title of Barrie's 'The Admirable Creighton' reminds Ye Ed of other idiotic changes that have been made in well known literary works.

Witness 'Lean-Faced' Griffith's screen version of 'The Two Orphans,' a French writing that had become known throughout the world. Griffith changed the title to 'Orphans of the Storm.'

Griffith may be forgiven, however, because William Fox had produced screen version of this same work a few years before starring the then virtually unknown Theda Bara who afterwards became the feminine Ruddy Valentino of the screen. David Wark probably didn't want another release given the Fox version at same time he released 'Orphans of the Storm.'

Another instance we recall was the screen adaptation of what we consider one of the best short stories ever written for the screen. F. Scott Fitzgerald called it 'Head Over Shoulders.' Metro when it produced it gave the asinine title of 'A Chorus Girl's Romance,' sounding more like one of Laura Jean Libby's or Elinor Glyn's stirring narratives of leopard skin love than the excellent story it was supposed to tell.

Viola Dana and Gareth Hughes did the principal roles in 'Head Over Shoulders' as it should have been called, and on strength of young Hughes 'stealing' the picture from Miss Dana who was really meant to be the star, Hughes was given Metro contract.

There's a plain case of a story making an actor on which Ye Ed based this column yesterday.

Sid Terris Looks Bad Against Buffalo Boy

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—It was the consensus of opinion today that Sid Terris, leading contender for Benny Leonard's title, had failed to impress as a championship possibility in gaining a close decision over Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo at the end of twelve rounds last night. After being outstepped in the early rounds, Goodrich rallied and carried the fight to Terris, whose dancing tactics were pretty, but not altogether effective. Many thought that Goodrich was entitled to a draw.

Gibbons Matched With Firpo for London Go

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The Gibbons-Firpo match is practically a certainty for March 30, the Daily Mail announced today. The contest promises to be the biggest fight Great Britain has had, the Mail adds, since Peter Jackson fought Frank Slavin in 1892.

BOWLING SCORES

Pete Neise, Clanin and teammates took three straight from the C. U. Y. V. outfit in a major league game last night at the Recreation alleys. (Bowling scorers, please note: Please print the name of the clubs, at least, so they are readable; today's designations are just guesswork.) Anyway, Clanin of the winners and Walters of the losers tied for high individual score with 224, but in the individual averages Clanin had the lead with 205.

Pullman Cafemen took two out of three games from Caswell's Gateways in a Foothill league match, the second and deciding game going to the food servers, 1011-1000. Moore of the winners bowled 247 in the second game. The scores:

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—A championship is within the grasp of Charley Weinert. Don't laugh boys, it's true.

Charley, who grew up in Newark was, however, born in Austria and he has had a request from the leading citizens of his old native province, or county or whatever it is, to come over there and win the heavyweight championship of Europe.

And the Adonis is going to do that little thing. Don't think he can't. All he has to do is to meet Jack Bloomfield or Joe Beckett in England and what he would do to either or both is a crime and then tackle Ermino Spalla, whom he should get by in handy style.

Charley would sit pretty as the heavyweight champion of Europe, with Austria claiming him as her own. And Chermany would be likely to butt in with a hearty hoch for the teutonic race—which has been pretty much under a cloud since Kaiser Bill started something he could not finish.

But first Weinert is going to put himself in the best shape of his life by fighting a number of bouts. In his recent starts he has beaten Romero, Firpo and Sharkey among others, and now he is booked to mingle once more with the Chilean in Boston.

Tommy Gibbons stowed Jack Burke away the other night, a fact which lends color to the fact that the St. Paul mauler is improving in his hitting.

Jack Burke, who worked out with Dempsey when Jack was in Montana preparing for Gibbons, is nobody's set up and in knocking him out Tommy turned in a creditable feat.

HIT REGULARS WHO DESERT PRESIDENT

Insurgents Welcome Solons Striving to Override Postal Bill Veto

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Who is regular now and what is regularity anyhow? This is the most embarrassing question being asked on capitol hill. For it leaves the friends of President Coolidge bewildered and puzzled and gives the radicals who recently were read out of the Republican party their chance to turn satire and sarcasm on their colleagues.

President Coolidge has won in his fight to have the recent veto of the postal pay bill sustained but some of the best "regulars" in the Republican party deserted him. Senator Edge of New Jersey who was one of the prime movers in the fight to oust the western radicals from the Republican party for deserting President Coolidge in the last campaign turned on the president himself by voting to override the veto only to be twitted by the westerners for his irregularity.

Again in this session as in the last the regulars have failed to give their whole-hearted support to President Coolidge. They voted to override his veto on the soldier bonus, ignored his repeated requests with respect to the Japanese provisions of the immigration law, refused to accept the Mellon plan and many voted to override the Bursum bill for soldiers' pensions.

'Bolting Senators'

It had been confidently expected that with the results of the last election still ringing in their ears the Republican senators would stand by the president to a man—at least the theoretical students of government might have been sure of it. But practical politics don't work that way and in the list of Republican senators who did not stand by President Coolidge were Dale of Vermont, Elkins of West Virginia, Jones of Washington, McLean of Connecticut, McNary of Oregon, Means of Colorado, Moses of New Hampshire, Norris of Nebraska, David Reed of Pennsylvania, Shortridge of California, Stanfield of Oregon, and James Wadsworth of New York.

There were others like Shipstead of Minnesota, Johnson of California, Brookhart of Iowa. Ladd and Frazier of North Dakota and La Follette of Wisconsin who were inevitably opposed to the president on this issue, but the surprise was that so many avowed regulars did not help Mr. Coolidge who won out by the narrow margin of one vote, and he had the assistance of Senators King, Utah; Owen of Oklahoma, and Dial of South Carolina, Democrats.

The issue was a simple one. The postal employes have needed an increase in pay. Nearly everybody favored it, including the president, but Mr. Coolidge insisted that a means of providing the revenue be assured. Under the circumstances many a senator reversed himself and voted to sustain the veto particularly since another bill had been introduced to revise postal rates and give the needed revenue. This, Mr. Coolidge is known to have favored as an alternative. The Sterling bill, however, has little chance of passage this session because it can not be advanced on the calendar without special action which is unlikely.

Easy Landing Place

"Between ourselves," said Senator Norris of Nebraska in his speech, "It is not wrong to admit that everybody knows the (Sterling) bill can not pass and will not pass. It is, as a matter of fact, brought in here by our considerate leaders to give us a safe and easy landing place.

"So, my friends, I hope you will listen to the voice of regularity from those who have lived long lives of regularity, knowing always that while your course may appear to be a little bit wrong or difficult, the best thing to do is to swallow the dose that our leaders tell us is good for us, look as happy as we can and in due time will come our great reward."

Mr. Norris, of course, meant the exact opposite, for he favored overriding the presidential veto and was poking fun by a mock appeal to "stand by the president."

Explain Actions

Senator Ladd of North Dakota used the same tactics, in fact, the little band of insurgents had the time of their lives welcoming the new "insurgents" into their ranks. The whole thing has left an impression of disappointment that on the first vital test since the election, Mr. Coolidge could not command the support of a score of Republican regulars.

It is only fair to explain, on the other hand, that the fear of political reprisals by the postal employes or at least by rival candidates in future primaries who would work up dissatisfaction influenced many of the regulars to vote as they did against Mr. Coolidge. Those who stood by the president insisted that Mr. Coolidge had won by a tremendous vote in November after he had vetoed the same bill and that, therefore, it could be assumed the electorate wanted his action sustained.

The incident teaches that the problem of "regularity" has by no means been solved and that already some of the Republicans who raised the issue against the western radicals on the question of desertion in the campaign wished they had put it on broader ground while some of the older heads in the Republican party quietly point out that their advice to let the thing alone should have been taken in the first place because "regularity" has not yet been defined.

All Glendale women, graduates or ex-students of the college are invited to greet the glee club members at the Shaw home.

NEED FORESTS

So many matches are made annually in the United States that it has long been profitable for match manufacturers to own their own forest or timber tracts. An Ohio match concern has just built its own logging railroad to bring out 15,000,000 feet a year, much of which the match manufacturing plants will use.

COOPERATIVES ASK BETTER ASSISTANCE

Farmers Do Not Want More Laws, Only Chance to Solve Problems

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Agricultural problems overshadowed all else last week in Washington, for, while nothing spectacular was done, the impression left by the meeting of the National Council of Farmers Co-operative Marketing associations will be a lasting one.

The national council had a satisfactory session with the agricultural commission which was appointed by President Coolidge to make recommendations with respect to the entire agricultural problem. While the commission is still in its early stages of work, there is no doubt that it took to heart the advice of the co-operatives, namely, that what is needed is no more specific legislation but a much more sympathetic administration by government agencies of existing laws.

The co-operatives said frankly they did not want to be subject to further regulation, that they were getting along very well now and that the government could best help them by letting them work out their own problems.

Seek Information

"President Coolidge," said Judge R. W. Bingham of Louisville, who is at the head of the national council of the co-operatives, "has taken very strong ground with respect to co-operative marketing and the department of agriculture has begun to acquire a real understanding of the problem. It has not been comprehended before but now our relations are most harmonious.

"The government can be of help to us in an information-giving rather than a regulatory way. Heretofore the department of agriculture has been devoted largely to the production and has not, as now, begun to devote itself to marketing.

"We are also receiving valuable aid from the bureau of markets of the department of commerce and we look upon the federal trade commission as a protection against unfair methods and monopolies.

"We now have the largest farm organization in America, more than 623,000 paying members It is a non-partisan organization devoted entirely to the business of merchandising farm products in a scientific and intelligent way."

Asked about the corn and wheat farmers and their problems, Judge Bingham said the co-operatives had not yet extended to the corn belt but that a small number of wheat growers were in the co-operative movement.

"It has been successful in wheat wherever it has been applied as in Oklahoma, Indiana, and Texas. When we market at least half of the cotton and wheat, we will be in a position to get better results although we are getting good results on the small percentage now handled. We marketed about $500,000,000 worth last year."

The most active opponents of the co-operative movements are the individauls engaged in speculation for the co-operative idea seeks to eliminate the imposition of profits to middlemen who take advantage of the farmers' crude methods of marketing his products.

There is no doubt that so far as the credit situation is concerned the individual farmer who is a member of a co-operative organization has the benefit of extended credit facilities. The intermediate credit banks for instance, recently established by Congress were sponsored by the co-operative societies and are providing a bulwark to the farmers. Since their entry into the situation, the big banks of New York and Chicago have been competing to lend money to the farmers, an unprecedented development.

The agricultural commission has not yet come to any conclusions on the major problems of agriculture but will examine every phase for the next several months in the hope of presenting a really worth-while report to the country. It is expected, however, that within a week the commission will have something to say about the cattle industry in which there has been depression. Action is to be taken on this because it is the most acute problem before the commission and irrespective of the fact that any legislation would have to be acted on before March fourth the commission is represented as being desirous of getting a remedy started at once.

On the whole agriculture is receiving serious consideration in the national capitol. The outstanding fact about the meeting of the national council of co-operatives is that Washington has been given to understand in unmistakable terms that proposals for price fixing and subsidy are not relished by some of most influential traders in the agricultural industry today.

FROM EAGLE ROCK

EAGLE ROCK, Jan. 14.—The present population of this section is estimated at 9,500. At the close of 1922 the population was estimated at 4,500. These figures, announced through the Eagle Rock Chamber of Commerce, show a gain of 5,000 population in two years. In 1920 there were 2,250 people living here, according to official United States figures. In 1910 the population of Eagle Rock was 600.

Fred E. Biles, well known local banker, has this to say for the immediate future of the section:

"We have every reason to believe that 1925 will be a year of prosperity for Eagle Rock.

"The general decrease in building last year meant only that we had caught up, to some extent, with the wartime shortage and the demand created by the enormous increase in our population. Even so, the value of building permits in this section during 1924 averaged 23 per cent more than during 1922, which placed Los Angeles among the four or five cities in the country highest in the amount of construction for the year."

The World Social society of the Congregational church will meet Thursday, January 15, at the home of Mrs. C. M. Hensley, 5143 Hermosa avenue. Mrs. Frank Fisk will be in charge of the program.

Miss Wilhelmina Bennett, who has been visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Bennett, of 5252 Shearin avenue, has returned to Santa Ana, where she will again take up her work teaching school.

Mrs. Laura R. Walcott has been elected president, by unanimous vote, of the Southern California Hairdressers' association.

SUGAR MART POINTS LOW PRICES

Ten Per Cent More Sweets Than Record Year Just Passed

By J. C. ROYLE
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—There will be at least 10 per cent more sugar to fill the sweet tooth of the world in 1925 than in the record breaking year of 1924 and indications point to continued low prices for three months at least. Cuban raw sugar has slumped over 20 per cent in price in the last month and the time of heavy selling of Cuban stocks is at hand

The Cuban mills are now grinding the largest crop ever known on the island. Weather conditions there have been exceptionally favorable recently and the warm, dry weather has counterbalanced excessive rains earlier in the season which it was feared would reduce the sugar content of the cane.

Notwithstanding these facts, the Cuban growers continue to issue complaints which in reality are demands for protection against high priced American labor. Cuba has the advantage of freight haul over Hawaii, the Philippines and Porto Rico. Wages are lower in Cuba than in the island possessions of the United States. Cane is grown with less labor than it takes to grow corn in this country and the production of sugar consists simply in cutting the cane, crushing it and boiling down the juice.

Beet Sugar Situation

Beet sugar, on the other hand, against competition of which the Cuban growers protest most vigorously, involves a highly complicated process. The beet land must be thoroughly tilled, the seed carefully sown, the plants weeded, topped and thinned, the crop harvested, the tops cut off and the beets washed and sliced. Even after that the process of extracting the sugar content is a somewhat intricate one. The highest paid farm labor in the world is employed in this country and used in this industry. Yet beet producers and beet sugar manufacturers have been able to keep their product at a level of prices constantly lower than for the Cuban-produced sugar.

The Cuban producers cannot get enough natives of the island to work and complain wages have risen and that with a supply of labor almost certain to be inadequate further advances are imminent. Labor has been imported into Cuba from neighboring islands and from Mexico and South America but this labor, which beet producers cannot call upon, still is paid on a scale far beneath that obtaining in the beet fields.

Europe will manufacture approximately 6,700,000 tons of beet sugar this season or enough to take care of a large part of the trans-Atlantic requirements. Stocks of sugar in Cuban ports are 83 per cent larger than at this time last year and a much larger proportion of the crop will be available for export to the United States than in 1924. This seemingly would indicate low prices, at least until mid-summer when consumption is at its height. Low prices will stimulate consumption to some extent although it is not believed this increase in use will equal the gain in supply.

Another Angle

Cuban producers who "sell to themselves" however, may not do so badly. Many Cuban mills and plantations are controlled by American refiners and the drop in prices of refined sugar in the last month has been considerably less than for raws. With a satisfactory differential between raw and granulated, refiners normally can make a better showing with relatively low, than with relatively high, sugar prices since low prices stimulate retail purchase.

With the American Beet Sugar production estimated at the record figure of 1,000,000 tons, there is not much chance that the differential between raw and refined will favor the latter too greatly, since the beet sugar producers have been active competitors for business even on the Atlantic seaboard and Texas City sugars are now actively competing in this market. Germany has released 110,000 tons for export and European sowing this year will show another increase except in Italy.

The Louisiana sugar industry is keenly depressed. The crop is the smallest in thirty years and it is doubtful if the yields will equal 100,000 fons or one-third of normal. The crop probably will yield growers $15,000,000 as compared with $30,000,000 last year.

A small battery-operated electric lamp has been invented that can be attached to the handle of a safety razor to enable a man to shave where no other light is available.

BURBANK NEWS

BURBANK, Jan. 14.—Orange Grove avenue from the foothills to San Fernando boulevard has been repaved and is now open. The work done comprised tearing up the macadam, oiling it, working it down smooth again and finishing with coats of gravel and tar, reports A. J. Rose, street superintendent. The expense was borne by the city, he states, no property owners being assessed.

The following reports are issued from the office of W. E. French, manager of the public service department:

At the beginning of 1924 the total number of electric meters in operation in the city served by the city plant, was 2,469. At the beginning of 1925 the total had grown to 3,111, showing an increase of 642 meters.

The number of water meters at the beginning of 1924 was 2,286, while at the beginning of this year the number totaled 2,020, showing an increase of 724.

The report of the plumbing inspector from February 22 to December 31 in 1924 showed 2,285 inspections, or an average of 228 per month.

A group of American Indians employed by a Hollywood "movie" outfit visited Burbank recently on a shopping tour. Their shopping, bystanders declare, was confined largely to the purchase of peanuts, for which they appear to have a marked weakness.

Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Jarvis of Empire avenue were pleasantly surprised by a visit from their former neighbors in Wellsville, Ohio, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Schultz, who spent a few days with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Seeling of Philadelphia have arrived here and are visiting at the home of Mr. Seeling's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Seeling of 642 Santa Anita avenue.

ADOPT PLEATS FOR SPRING COSTUMES

Great Deal Of Leather To Be Used In Trimming Milady's Gowns

By AILEEN LAMONT
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Society can and will take great strides this spring. All the world has come to America for freedom of conscience but the fashionables have had to go to France for freedom of movement. This year Parisian designers in preparing costumes for the Riviera have rediscovered and adopted the pleat. By its aid, they also found that a garment did not have to be straight and tight if it only looked so.

The three features of the spring dresses, therefore, are pleats, Kasha, the material in which the pleats are placed, and leather, the material with which many dresses and hats are trimmed. Dresses of kasha, that beautiful soft yielding woolen fabric, in white or pastel shades, form a part of nearly every winter resort wardrobe today.

Such costumes may be of the ensemble, the one piece or the two piece type. The skirts of nearly all are pleated. The pleats may be of the box variety, either inverted or straight, or of the narrower folds. They may extend entirely around the skirt or be arranged in panels. In all cases the slim silhouette is maintained, the skirts falling back into straight lines when the wearer is not in motion.

One such costume just imported is of white kasha. It is of the ensemble variety, consisting of a beautifully cut skirt with panels of fine pleats at either side. This is surmounted by a short godet jacket trimmed with lettuce green leather. Over this is worn a cape of white and green checks, its lines being lengthened by long wide pleats. The front of the cape is cut away below the white marabou collar to reveal the dress beneath. This costume is specially designed as appropriate for what the French designate as "the d'apres sport" or after sport tea.

Another striking costume is a dress of white knitted woolen material over which falls a very short skirt of beige kasha with brown stripes. This skirt is cut in bands at the bottom which are fastened together with buttons. The beads may be unfastened to give whatever freedom of movement is desired.

The small spring hats, most of them of picot or milan straw, which are worn with the kasha costumes, owe their inspiration to illustrations from a seventeenth century Italian comedy. But they are not to be laughed at. The majority are small round and with narrow brims in contrast to the comedy which was broad even for those days. The high draped crowns are decorated with leather and tortoise shell ornaments. The leather bands are frequently of contrasting shades. Gold leather on brown picot is a favorite combination.

The hat pin is again making a hesitating appearance as an ornament on these head coverings. The pins have jet, steel, tortoise shell or jade beads. Some hats are made entirely of multi-colored leather strips woven tightly together. For evening the wider straw lace hats enhanced with flowers and accompanied by a little lace veil offer a novelty.

LEGION NOTES

"Experience has shown that the $5,000,000 endowment fund which the American Legion is seeking from its members and the public jointly is necessary in the proper care of disabled veterans of the war and orphaned children of veterans," Nathan F. Coombs, state commander of the American Legion in California, says. "This sum will provide a yearly income of $225,000, and California will receive her share," Coombs declares.

The work which the Legionnaires propose to do is supplemental to that done by the United States government, and will seek to reach the dependents of veterans who are not otherwise provided for.

According to Claude Deal of Alameda, chairman of the American Legion's committee on athletics, posts throughout the state are organizing for the state champion title in boxing, basketball, bowling, swimming and other winter sports. Deal plans to conduct, during the early summer, two big athletic contests, one in the north and the other in the south. The affairs will be followed by a barbecue-picnic, army style, and the victors will contend for final supremacy at the convention's athletic circus at Catalina next September.

American Legion officials of California have received notice of the meeting of the national executive committee of the organization in Indianapolis, Ind., this week, to fix the date of the annual national convention of the war veterans, scheduled for Omaha, Neb., this fall.

The national committee may also decide upon the establishment of a research scholarship in memory of the French scientist, Louis Pasteur.

The United States government, has at last marked the grave of James Bethel Gresham, first American killed in the World war, at Evansville, Ind. The American Legion called attention to the fact that Gresham's grave bore only a bottle with a faded scrap of paper inside, on which was written "James Bethel Gresham, he died for you and me." The federal government ordered a stone marker placed on the grave.

Co-operating with the United United States public health service and the United States department of agriculture, the American Legion, through its state commander, Nathan F. Coombs, of Napa, has called upon the 300 posts in California to begin a "drive" for the extermination of the ground squirrel. This animal, according to Surgeon General Cumming, is a carrier of bubonic and pneumonic plague, and demands continuous vigilance on the part of the government and local authorities.

Enormous losses are annually experienced by the farmer from the ground squirrel, as well as from rats and mice. All Legion posts are expected to organize at once in assisting the federal authorities in this work.

DRIVE LAUNCHED FOR LOWER FARES

Commerce Board's Decision To Investigate, Hints Fight Is On

A fight for reduced street car fares between Glendale and Los Angeles and for more adequate bus transportation facilities over the local lines, was hinted today when the transportation committee of the Chamber of Commerce announced plans for an investigation of transportation conditions with a view of determining on lower rates and better service.

The committee, headed by W. T. Jefferson, real estate and investment broker with offices on Los Feliz road, presented a recommendation to the board of directors of the chamber, urging that the subject of reduced fares be taken up in the near future and that the committee be empowered to proceed with an investigation of existing conditions. Authority to proceed was given by President D. H. Smith of the chamber.

Survey Planned

Data on present fares, the routes of local bus lines and the extent of territory served by these busses, will be sought by the committee, Mr. Jefferson stated. A meeting with officials of the railroad company will be arranged for the near future, he said, at which time representatives of interested, local organizations and groups will be invited to participate.

The present action of the Glendale Chamber of Commerce committee follows close on the heels of a vigorous appeal filed with the State Railroad commission by the Atwater Community Improvement association, protesting present high rates, and seeking a reduction in fares from down-town Los Angeles to the Atwater district over the Glendale line to at least compare with the fares charged over the Hollywood line of the Pacific Electric.

Burbank Police Launch Drive for 'Night Riders'

With a strong cordon of Burbank police and deputies from the sheriff's office on vigil throughout the night, anticipated violence and an attempt upon the lives of Jay Henry, Burbank grocer, and his family, failed to mature. Investigators believe the mysterious death warning, signed, "The Night Riwers," was the prank of mischievous boys. The grocer denied that he had had any disputes or other reasons for suspecting anyone would attempt to kill him.

Henry discovered the note on the door of his grocery store when he arrived at his place of business yesterday. His fears were increased, when last night, his two dogs were alleged to have been stolen from the grounds of his home. The note warned Henry that he was marked for death and that notification of the police would only entail greater suffering. Frank Myer, a suspect taken into custody in connection with the case was released last night after he had proved his innocence. Burbank police, under Chief John Long, are devoting their efforts to locating the youths believed to have written the death note.

State Law Makers Get Biennial Fish Report

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 14.—The biennial report of the California fish and game commission was presented to both houses of the Legislature today. The report shows expenditures for the two-year period of $997,877.90 and revenues received of $1,190,-112.45, leaving a surplus for the biennium of $192,234.55. Tariff Law Closed To Change This Session

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Decision was reached by Republican members of the House ways and means committee that the tariff laws should not be opened at this session for any changes, even those suggested as remedial and corrective in character. It was held by the majority members of the committee there was no time at the present session to consider even desirable changes in tariff laws, and any attempt to make changes would start discussions that would delay other legislation.

Mellon Shapes Relief In Rail Debtors' Case

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—A reduction in interest charges on $323,000,000 in outstanding government loans to American railways was recommended today by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in testifying before the Senate interstate commerce committee.

Mellon urged this step as a means of averting financial catastrophies among the debtor railroads. He suggested a slash in the interest rate from 6 to 4¾ per cent, declaring the reduction would be a "good business move."

SCREEN ACTRESS DEFENDS FLAPPER

Viola Dana Upholds Present Day Type and Styles For Modern Girl

By MARIAN MARSHALL
For Southland News Service

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 14.—"Every once in a while we hear some person who has little contact with modern girls shout out, 'Oh, what are we going to do about them?' says Viola Dana, screen star, 'and I ache to shout back just as vociferously 'grow up with them and you'll learn a good deal.'"

Miss Dana has kept out of the discussion for several years but reading a recent newspaper article by a woman who compared the girls of today and those of thirty years ago with obvious bias and condemnation of all modern sisters, the diminutive screen player waxed enthusiastic in defense of the girls of today.

"The advancement of civilization, every element of it, during the past few years has been so rapid and to meet demands of a fast growing population of active people some decided changes in long established customs have seemed necessary," Miss Dana said before leaving for New York. "Girls have bobbed their hair. Girls have shortened their skirts. Girls have learned to do a good deal of men's work. Girls have learned to use their heads as well as their smiles and girls are accomplishing wonderful things in the world's business. There is less pretense, less deceit and artificiality among girls today than there ever was and modern girls are healthier and more charming, on an average, than they ever were.

Higher Efficiency

"Most people deliberately pick on the so-called flappers because of some unimportant custom of dress or habit. When you visit business offices, schools and hospitals today you find a lot of feminine efficiency. More than you found several years back. When you read the graduating lists of high schools today you find girls of 14 and 15 ready to enter college. A few years back they were merely finishing grammar school at that age. Girl athletes today hold many records, proving their physical strength has never been better and the modern young mothers are just as devoted, just as capable, as mothers ever were.

"Don't condemn the so-called flapper," concludes Miss Dana. "Study her and you'll learn a lot that's worth knowing."

Esther Ralston, former Glendale girl, heads the list in James Cruze's "Beggar on Horseback," now being made by Paramount. Featured with Miss Ralston are Edward Everett Horton, Theodore Kosloff, Edwin Connelly and Ethel Wales. In this production, Horton, a young artist, acquires untold wealth in the brief period of three hours. Millions of dollars in checks, currency, silver and gold are hurled at him from all sides. In the end, however, Horton awakens to find that it is all a dream.

ROME, Jan. 14.—The American motion picture firm producing the spectacle "Ben Hur" has become entangled in the political dissension in Italy and will return to the United States, according to a statement issued today by the company.

The star is Ramon Novarro and the director Fred Biblo. Marcus Loew, the New York vaudeville magnate, one of the principal owners of the Metro-Goldwyn corporation, returned only recently from Rome.

SAYS ECLIPSE WILL CAUSE TREMORS

Higher Tides and Earthquake In Ocean to Occur, Is Padre Prediction

By ELLIS H. MARTIN
For International News Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 14.—An earthquake is bound to occur as a result of forthcoming eclipse of the sun.

This opinion was expressed today by Father J. S. Ricard, noted seismologist of Santa Clara university, and leading exponent of the sun spot theory.

"During the eclipse which will occur January 24," Father Ricard explained, "the sun and moon being practically in conjunction, say 19 degrees south of the equator, if a perpendicular is let full from the sun and moon to the earth and a circle of 45 degrees radius is drawn on the earth, the circumference of that circle will be subject to the greatest lunisolar pole.

Cause Higher Tides

"Hence during the eclipse, a higher tide will form over the Atlantic and the Pacific. That circumference will extend from 27 degrees north to 63 degrees south.

"On the seismic portion of it which always is harder in the ocean and other large bodies of water, an earthquake is bound to occur. The luni-solar pole causes cracks in the earth, water filters in, is converted into super-heated steam, the latter explodes and the explosion makes the quake."

In Pacific time the eclipse begins at 4:41 a. m., Father Ricard said, and ends at 9:05 a. m. January 24.

Sun spot activity will not materially affect the situation, Father Ricard said.

"There is no maximum of sun spots just now," the famous padre of the rains" explained. "We are barely out of the past minimum—the last three weeks witnessing hardly any solar activity.

"On January 23, a calculated solar storm will occur centrally, calling for a storm on the western sections of the Pacific states. The only effect I would expect as attributable to the moon would be pulling the storm to Southern California."

NEW YORK CLOSING

By W. S. COUSINS
For International News Service.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Speculative markets were inclined to rest on their oars today and absorb profit-taking in grain and stocks and to consolidate the position recently gained by some of the active stocks in the major markets, particularly in the oil, motor and equipment stocks. Large blocks of speculative stocks were put up for sale by traders who were anxious to convert paper profits into cash, and this had the effect of holding up the rally in prices which has been in progress without interruption since Tuesday of last week. But buying demand was sufficient to form a good cushion under the dropping prices of leading industrial stocks and declines were small in comparison with the swift advances made since the turn of the year.

The action of the money market was not helpful to the bulls, call money opening at 3 per cent. but being marked up to 3½ before noon. Time money was firmer and bond prices showed a tendency to decline. Sterling exchange had a good record, recovering sharply from its early irregularity. Favorable industrial news was furnished by the steel, copper and oil industries, and commodity prices were inclined higher.

The equipment stocks were the first to show a decided recovery. Baldwin mounted to 136½, the highest price since 1923; American Locomotive gained three points and sold up to 119½, the highest price recorded for the present stock. American Car & Foundry was up two points, at 203, and Lima Locomotive, on a heavy turnover, sold up nearly four points, to a new high at 74⅜. Reports that American Car & Foundry and American Locomotive would amalgamate were not generally credited.

Stock sales today were 2,041,200 shares; bonds $14,920,000.

FINANCIAL BRIEFS

By Southland News Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—While the daily average production of oil in California declined 1500 barrels during the past week, the output of the various fields in the Los Angeles basin showed a net increase of 500 barrels. A further increase of 1000 barrels a day was made by the Dominguez field, which thus easily retained its newly acquired position as the second producing field in this section of the state, and 500 barrels each by Santa Fe Springs and Huntington Beach.

The Pacific Coast Packing corporation which handles the bulk of the packing business in California and a large share of the total on the Pacific coast, had an exceptionally good year in 1924, according to reports on the market today. It is understood there is a strong likelihood that the $6 dividend rate in force since March, 1920, will be raised to $7 in April. With final results dependent on inventory, the stock is expected to earn $13 and possibly $14 a share for common shares.

EARNING LIMIT PLACED AT $10,000

Congress Says No Man Can Legitimately Make More Than That

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—This year Congress puts into effect its formal and formidable dictum that no man can legitimately "earn" more than $10,000 a year. The congressmen and senators are paid by a benevolent government $7,500 a year and it is but natural they should figure that no man can be more than $2,500 more intelligent, more important and more useful than the national legislators elected by the vote of a sovereign people. Either that or congress is thinking very seriously of raising its own salary to the $10,000 mark.

May be then in future legislation the legitimate earning capacity of the individual might be lifted to $12,500. As it is, however, congress is of the opinion that President Coolidge, for example, is being overpaid something like $65,000 a year. Mr. Coolidge is a frugal-living, economical man, brought up in the thrifty atmosphere of New England, but there are no indications as yet that he agrees with congress on the subject of the executive's pay. The president is doing his best on the side, however, by conserving his travel allowance to the utmost limit.

How It Works

Congress is of the opinion that cabinet officers must be receiving $2,000 a year more than they "earn." This also goes for the vice-president. Fortunately for "Hell and Maria" Dawes when he comes to Washington he will have an independent income above the $12,000, the first vice-president to be in that enviable position for nearly a generation. And whether he "earns" it or not, General Dawes will have one of the best incomes in official life.

Chief Justice Taft is being "overpaid" something like $4,500, if the congressional criterion as to legitimate earnings is sound. All of his associate justices are overstepping the bounds by something like $4,000 per annum.

Heaven only knows what congress privately thinks of the $50,000 a year man, or the $150,000 a year man that so many corporations are seeking or have sought in the past. Congress can't see that sort of stuff at all. No man can earn more than $10,000 a year, therefore, no man is worth more than $10,000 a year.

When John Hays Hammond some years ago became consulting engineer for the Guggenheim interests at a salary said to have been $500,000 a year he transgressed the congressional idea of a man's worth and earning capacity by so many hundreds of per cent there couldn't possibly be any health in him. That was at a time, too, when the dollar was worth 100 cents. Of course, a salary of $500,000 today isn't much to talk about at all. It amounts to only $300,000 with dollar valued at sixty cents.

'Earned' Income

Congress has expressed its opinion in the $10,000 matter in the most effective way in which it could speak. It has fixed $10,000 a year as the limit in computing an "earned income" in the new federal tax law which became effective January 1 and which applies to incomes "earned" during 1924. Congress has decreed that after a man has passed the $10,000 mark his income ceases to be "earned" and, therefore, must be obtained by some sort of skull-duggery. On earned incomes there is a reduction of 25 per cent interest charges. It has been held congress did not mean to deprive those earning in excess of $10,000 of all discounts. The salaried man above $10,000 may figure the reduction on his first ten and then pay the full rate on the balance.

Of course, the Republicans are blaming the Democrats for the $10,000 limit. They say the Democrats practically wrote the new tax law. Naturally this explains much, for $10,000 is a whaling big sum to a Democrat. The Democratic campaign fund did not amount to very much more than that.

DECIDE ON BRIDGES NEAR ATWATER PARK

Call Joint Meeting of Improvement Association for Tuesday Night At Hollywood Athletic Club

The joint session of improvement associations and Chambers of Commerce with the Board of Supervisors and members of the Los Angeles City Council, at which adequate bridge facilities across the Los Angeles river will be advocated, will take place next Tuesday night at the Hollywood Athletic club, according to Alfred J. Barnes, large property owner and member of the Los Angeles Planning commission.

Engineers and traffic experts will join in the discussion of plans for several new bridges across the river. Glendale Chamber of Commerce will be represented by its board of directors who have adjourned their regular meeting in order to attend the bridge confab.

City and county officials will be urged to place a bond issue on the ballot at the time of the May general election to finance the building of the bridges. Officers of the Atwater Community Improvement association, headed by President Arthur M. Gillman will join the meeting.

Plan Business Block

A new business block for the Atwater district is assured with announcement of plans for a three-room store building to be erected in the 3100 block on Glendale boulevard between Glenfeliz and Edenhurst avenues, west side of the Pacific Electric tracks.

George C. Belden, 1825 Edgemont street, will own the new structure which will be a valued addition to the business section of Atwater park. Ground will be broken for the new building, Mr. Belden stated, as soon as the plans and specifications are completed

Parent-Teachers Meet

The Atwater Parent-Teachers' association heard Miss Helen Graham of Los Angeles lecture on "The Home of Today and Tomorrow" at the regular monthly meeting at the Atwater school yesterday afternoon. A large number of Atwater mothers attended the meeting.

Luncheon was served at noon by the association members for friends and children of the school. Approximately $55 for the P.-T. A. fund was raised, Mrs. E. V. Bacon, president, announced.

Following the luncheon the meeting took place in the school assembly room. A musical program including piano solos by Marion Stadler, recitations by James Rammage, violin solos by little Frieda Rosenfed and a short talk on school thrift by Mrs. Anna La Grange, supervisor of the Los Angeles city school savings department.

Plans for a five hundred party at the home of Mrs. L. B. Garden, 3460 Perlita avenue, to be given under the auspices of the P.-T. A. on Thursday night of this week, were completed at the meeting. Money raised through the affair will go toward the P.-T. A. fund.

Form Millinery Class

A millinery class for women of the Atwater district will be opened at the Atwater school, according to Miss Rosalind Gates, principal. The class will be given the regular night school Smith-Hughes course in millinery. All women who are interested are invited to register with Miss Gates immediately. Classes will be held each Wednesday afternoon from 1 to 5 o'clock.

To Open Rabbit Farm

R. L. Souvern, rabbit expert, has leased a large tract of land bordering 300 feet on Los Feliz road and running through to the line of the proposed Victory boulevard and will open a large rabbit farm. Mr. Souvern will keep 28,000 rabbits on the premises, raising them for meat purposes. He will erect a large display room facing on Los Feliz road.

BUILDING FIRM MOVES INTO CITY

Thermosoid System Expects To Double Output In Near Future

Thermosoid Construction System, Inc., in transferring general offices from Los Angeles to its factory at Colorado boulevard and San Fernando road, stated through its general manager that increasing local demands for its concrete building material made changes necessary and that present capacity of plant was material for thre houses per week with plans for doubling output in near future.

The Thermosoid System is starting off the new year with a rush, as evidenced by contracts already taken that calls for immediate construction as well as many others offered, that are taking their regular course, the owners merely waiting for the final plans and specifications being submitted for their approval, all of which it is stated, is taxing the architectural and drafting departments of this concern to the limit.

Edward F. Needham, general manager, is highly elated over the general outlook for the coming year, and the increasing demands for the reinforced concrete building material manufactured by his concern and on being asked to what he attribute the increasing interest shown by those contemplating the use of this building material in the improvement of their properties, stated:

Manager's Statement.

"I consider this interest is due to the fact that the public is becoming educated to the difference between flimsy construction that immediately begins to depreciate after being erected, and a more permanent type of construction that is to be had in the utilizing of precast concrete hollow wall construction, manufactured in our plant. This fact becomes more interesting to the prospective home builder, when it is found that we can give him this type of construction at the same price of frame or stucco on wire, thus giving him a job that is permanent—there being no cost of upkeep on account of no depreciation—the borrowing power on such an improvement is increased and the insurance rate reduced by reason of its being fireproof.

"This substantial type of construction also makes it possible for us to finance prospective home builders 100 per cent, allowing them to repay same on terms like rent over a period of 10 to 15 years, at an interest rate as low as 6½ per cent. So I would say that the combination of such a substantial type of construction, that makes it possible for us to offer such liberal financing terms, is the real answer as to the popularity of our concrete building material which is being demonstrated by contracts now offered for immediate construction."

MOTHER LOVE BRINGS SON TO 'LIFE'

Wealthy Boy, Thought Dead Found In Chicago At Hobo's Retreat

By O. L. SCOTT
Special Correspondent of The Glendale Evening News, Copyright, 1925

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—A mother's intuition that kept her from accepting the general belief that her only son was dead, made possible the return to Memphis, Tenn., today of Mr. and Mrs. C. Hallis Conrad, with their errant boy, Howard, found by Mrs. Conrad after a four months' search, living as a hobo in a Chicago flop house.

Mystery and suspicion operated at home to cloud the search, as the undaunted Mrs. Conrad, wealthy and determined, carried on her nation-wide canvass for her runaway only son. How she found him, his talents unnoticed among the great unwashed, at a time when her hopes were almost shattered, was told today by the mother just before returning to Memphis.

"Through all the mystery, the uncertainty and the apparent hopelessness of my efforts, I never did abandon the thought that Howard was alive and in need of help somewhere in this country," Mrs. Conrad said. "And now finding him, I can say that my most vivid impression has been of the general family feeling of helpfulness that seems to prevail everywhere in the country for one in distress.

Brilliant Orator

"My boy, a brilliant orator in his school, and a writer of ability for his age, suffered a nervous collapse while attending Cincinnati university, from which he has not recovered. At home he had been under care of a negro servant. With this servant and another negro he was seen riding last September 26, when his automobile overturned.

"One negro was killed, and the other injured. Howard was no place to be found. Suspicion turned to the negro. It was thought that my boy was also killed and that he had buried him some place, fearing that he would be held responsible. Almost every one took it for granted that Howard was dead except me.

"I thought that in his condition he had probably come out of the accident unhurt and fearing that he would be charged with responsibility for the negro's death, had fled."

"That's what happened," Howard interjected. "I was afraid of the consequences, and so with what little money I had, got away."

Newspapers Help

"Then came the long search," Mrs. Conrad resumed. "First I concentrated on the cities of the south, thinking that he would go to some place he knew. As clew after clew failed, the search extended to every part of the country.

"Everywhere newspapers lent their help. People sent to me every possible clew. It seemed that the whole country had joined in the search when I got word from a former chum of Howard's in Chicago that he had seen him. I left immediately for Chicago, though it was like trying to find a needle in a haystack to find a boy here.

"Just as we were about to conclude that the search was hopeless, I saw Howard in a workingman's hotel on Van Buren street, and we met after these months of uncertainty and anxiety.

"Now he is out of those hobo surroundings, reconciled, and happy to go home. My intuitive belief that he was alive has proved correct. And the thousands of dollars spent on the search have been repaid a thousand times in this reunion."

Hotel Stockholders Show Financial Status

poration certain to rise sharply in value within the next few years.

C. W. Ingledue, president of the Hotel Glendale, Inc., made the announcement that, to put the enterprise on a sound financial footing, the directors had decided to issue another $110,000 of capital stock. After an address wherein he pointed out the many difficulties that had been overcome, calling attention to the fact that the hotel is already three stories up and the other three under construction, Mr. Ingledue called upon the stockholders present to augment their subscriptions to this enterprise by pledging themselves to buy additional shares. A large proportion of the proposed issue was thus underwritten.

The financial statement of the corporation, rendered last night by T. H. Menk, secretary, is summarized as follows: Assets—Hotel property, $500,000, with 100 feet land on Glendale avenue and 100 feet on East Broadway, totaling $675,000. Liabilities—Stock issued, $110,000; first mortgage bonds, $250,000; second mortgage, notes due banks and individuals, $98,000; additional over contract building price, $12,000; totalling $470,000.

Float Awards Arouse Ire of Commerce Body

a plan. He said he thought the idea of a strictly Glendale celebration was a good one and that he was anything but satisfied with the small amount of advertising benefit Glendale received in the Tournament of Roses when the sweepstakes prize was lost to the Angelus Temple entry. Mr. Smith was picking a committee today to work out a definite plan for an annual Glendale celebration. The men comprising this committee will be carefully chosen, he said, and their names will be announced later.

It was declared that other members of the board of directors were in accord with the movement. Vice-President Frank L. Fox and Director Arthur Campbell advocated the plan at the meeting of the directors last night.

Float Builder Objects

L. W. Chobe, Glendale's miracle float builder, who designed and constructed this city's entry, expressed dissatisfaction with the decision of the tournament judges.

"Before I build another float I will have a definite understanding with the Pasadena officials," he told the directors last night," and if Glendale has reached the point where she can't have any more prizes, we want to know it, so we won't be spending money foolishly."

Mr. Chobe said the fear that judges would discriminate against Glendale because this city has won first prize so often, prompted him to suggest several months ago that only a small, inexpensive float be entered with the understanding that it was not in competition. He said he thought under the circumstances, however, Glendale would have to go out to win, if a float were entered at all next New Year's day. The cost of the 1925 butterfly float amounted to more than $1800, according to figures presented by Mr. Chobe.

OPINIONS DIFFER ON STATE SPLIT

Northern Writer Advocates California Be Divided Into Two Sections

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 14.—Crystallizing opinion into words, which is to Southern Californians an evidence of bad faith on the part of the so-called "superior" California, C. K. McClatchy, writing in the Sacramento and Fresno Bee, papers which he edits, says:

"Time was when "yours truly" considered it would be a calamity irreparable if California did not remain as she is, one and inseparable. But his views have undergone a great change—turned a somersault, in fact.

"Today he is firmly of the opinion that the division of the state would be the best thing that could happen for the two sections thereof. They are far apart in ideas, in opinions, in modes of life and of thought, in views social, in views political and views politico-economic."

He says more, and concludes "the writer, for one, is willing the erring sister should go." On the other hand, a southern representative says:

"Northern California has been settled by the Chinese, Japanese, Italian and now the Slavonian. It no longer boasts the hardy American Anglo-Saxon heritage. Neither section is an erring sister. They have simply married into different families of different ideals, different modes and different views. And their children and children's children cannot be alike in thought."

Midwest Wholesalers Optimistic On Outlook

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 14.—The majority of the local wholesalers report business good and mail and telephone orders continue to pour in in large volume. Trade here is far ahead of that of a year ago in most lines. New shipments of spring and summer goods to wholesalers, now being received, will enable them to satisfy the demands from retailers which are beginning to manifest themselves. Local manufacturers face the brightest prospects in five years and many leaders predict record sales throughout the season, basing their conclusions on betterment in agriculture and the opening of new markets to local makers. Credit conditions are highly satisfactory.

Missouri Farm Crop's Value $353,699,180

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 14.—Missouri farm crops in 1924 were valued at $353,699,180, an increase of 8 per cent over 1923, although there was a reduction of 8 per cent in acreage. The cereal crops acreage was 10,004,000 compared to 10,772,000 and the farm value was $217,835,000 against $196,825,000 the year before.

Frisco Senator Would Pension All Over 70

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 14.—An old age pension bill, drawn along the lines of one presented two years ago, was again introduced in the Senate by Senator Daniel C. Murphy of San Francisco. This is the measure which the Order of Eagles is sponsoring. William M. Byrne, assemblyman of Los Angeles will sponsor the measure in that house. It provides that persons reaching the age of 70 become eligible to a state pension. There are now some 95,000 persons so eligible, according to William Haggerty, who is head of the pension commission of the Eagles. The law would cost the state $5,500,000 per year, Haggerty says. It would give persons entitled to pensions, $1 per day. To be eligible a person must have lived in California fifteen years.

Its authors say the pension measure would pay for itself, since it would virtually do away with alms houses, which now cost the people heavily.

OIL OUTLOOK IN 1925 IS BETTER

Price on Crude to Advance After First Part of Year, Is Prediction

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—The oil outlook for 1925 is better than it was in 1924 at this time, says R. D. Renso, chairman of the Tidewater Oil Co., in a statement over the wires of the E. F. Hutton Co. here.

"The oil business will not be so very good for the first three or four months," he said, "and the price of crude oil should remain about the same, but after that it should advance and the oil business should be very good."

The nation's most influential financiers are not only retaining their active holdings, but they are taking advantage of price recessions to add to their line. No more conclusive proof of the improvement in the economic conditions could be required than the fact that steel operations have expanded 20 per cent in the brief time since election. The line of least resistance is still on the side of rising prices.

Coast Citrus Help In Month's Postal Record

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—San Francisco and Los Angeles largely contributed in making the past December the greatest month in point of mail handled in the history of the postal service, according to receipts received today by Postmaster General New. The general increase for last month over December of 1923 amounted to 8.92 per cent.

San Francisco reported receipts of $840,311, as against $777,518 in 1923, while Los Angeles led all coast cities with receipts of $1,005,712, compared with $946,570 the preceding December. It was the first time in history that Los Angeles jumped into the "million-dollar-a-month" class, in which there are only five other cities.
